

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INQUIRY INTO THE SOURCES OF KARAITE

HALAKAH

THE causes of the Karaite schism and its early history are veiled in obscurity, as indeed are all the movements that originated in the Jewish world during the time between the conclusion of the Talmud Babli and the appearance of Saadia Gaon.

From the meager contemporary sources it would seem that from the second third of the eighth century until the downfall of the Gaonate (1038) the whole intellectual activity of Babylonian Jewry centered about the two Academies and their heads, the Geonim. Of the early Gaonic period the Jewish literature that has reached us from Babylonia is mainly halakic in character, e. g. Halakot Gedolot, Sheeltot, and works on liturgy, which afford us an insight into the religious life of the people. From them, however, we glean very little information about the inner life of the Jews in Babylonia before the rise of Karaism; hence the difficulty of fully understanding the causes which brought about the rise of the only Jewish sect that has had a long existence and has affected the course of Jewish history by the opposition it has aroused.

The study of sects always has a peculiar interest. During the thirties of the last century, the Karaites themselves made accessible to the scholarly world the works of some of their latter-day authorities, and with the publication of Simhah Pinsker's epoch-making work "Likkute Kadmoniyyot" (1860) the attention of Jewish scholarship was turned to Karaism and its literature. blinded by his discovery of an important phase in the development of Judaism, invented a pan-Karaite theory, according to which the Karaites are to be looked upon as the source of all intellectual achievement of mediæval Judaism (Likkute, I, 4, 32). The Masorah is a product mainly of theirs, and it is among them that we are to look for the beginnings of Hebrew grammar, lexicography, poetry, and sound biblical exegesis. The Rabbanites, since Saadia Gaon, were merely imitators of the Karaites. Pinsker believed that every Jewish scholar, prior to the eleventh century, who busied himself with the study of Bible alone, was a Karaite, and he transformed, accordingly, more than one Rabbanite into a Karaite.

The question of the origin of Karaism, its causes and early development is still awaiting solution. That Karaism is not the result of Anan's desire to revenge himself on Babylonian official Jewry, need not be said. Karaite literature affords us no data; there is a marked lack of historical sense among them. They have no tradition as to their origin, and their opinions are conflicting (comp. Pinsker, Likkute, II, 98). The belief that Karaism is but an echo of a a similar movement during this period in the Islamic world is now generally given up owing to the advance made in the knowledge of the inner development of Islam and, particularly, the nature of the Shiite heterodoxy (see I. Friedlaender, IQR., 1910, 185 ff.).

This question is bound up with the problem of the origin of the Karaite halakah which is of vital importance for the understanding the history of Tradition; as Geiger (ZDMG., XVI (1862), 716) says, it was always the differences in practice, not in dogma, that caused and sustained divisions in Israel. This is particularly true of the Karaites who differ in nothing but religious practices from the rest of Israel.

The solution offered by Geiger that the Karaites are the descendants of the Sadducees and their halakah Sadducean, is accepted with some modification by many scholars (comp. Poznański, REJ., XLIV (1902), 169). On the other hand, the eclectic nature of the Karaite halakah was recognized by several scholars (comp. S. L. Rapoport in Kerem Chemed, V (1841), 204 ff., and in Kaempf's Nichtandalusische Poesie, II, 240; P. Frankl, Ersch u. Gruber, sec. II, vol. 33, 12; Harkavy, in Grätz' Geschichte, V.4, 482 ff.; id., Jahrbuch f. jüd. Geschichte u. Literatur, II (1899), 116 ff., and elsewhere). No attempt was, however, made to explain the bulk of the Karaitic halakah, on these lines. I have therefore undertaken the work of tracing the individual Karaite laws to their respective sources, which will, at the same time, be the first exposition of the Karaite laws in general-prefacing it by an examination of the Sadducean-Karaitic theory. The term "Karaite halakah" is used here as a convenient one, though, as Kirkisani has unwillingly shown—and any Karaite code testifies to it—the laws on which all Karaites agree are few. The Karaite laws are discussed here not according to subject matter, but such as have common source are grouped together. I begin with Philo, as the relation of Karaite halakah to that of Philo has remained, to my knowledge, hitherto unnoticed. This relation, if established, may prove helpful in the understanding of other points in the inner history of Judaism during the first centuries of Islam.

For the halakah of Philo, I have used the work of Dr. B. Ritter, "Philo und die Halacha, eine vergleichende Studie," from which most of the citations from Philo in this treatise are taken. Other Philonian laws, not treated by Ritter, are discussed here, but only as they bear on the Karaite halakah.

Not all the early Karaites claimed antiquity for their This is evident from the reply of Salman b. Yeruham to Saadia's mention of their late origin (Pinsker, II, 19). Another contemporary of Saadia, Abu Jusuf Yakub al-Kirkisani, the most reliable historian among the Karaites, gives a date for what he calls the Rabbanite dissension: Jeroboam, to make permanent the power he had usurped and to prevent the Israelites owing allegiance to the house of David, divided the nation by sowing the seed of dissension, perverted the Law, and changed the calendar (I Kings 12, 32). The followers of Jeroboam in later times are called Rabbanites. Those who remained faithful to the original laws were the ancestors of the Karaites. This fanciful explanation found no credence even among the Karaites.*

Wünsche, Jüdische Literatur, II, 80). See, however, Harkavy in Grätz, Geschichte, V4, 472. That not all the Karaite contemporaries of Saadia claimed antiquity for their sect is evident also from Saadia's fourth answer in his polemical work against Ibn Sākaweihi. See JQR., XIII, 664; הקרם, I, 67.

The Karaites felt keenly the need of some account of their origin that would silence the reproach of the Rabbanites and found in the event recorded in the Baraita (Kiddushin 66a; see Josephus Ant., XIII, 13, 5) a basis for claim of ancient origin for their sect. As stated in that narrative, the disagreement between John Hyrcanus and the teachers of the Law resulted in the extermination of the latter, excepting Simeon b. Shatah. As a consequence, ignorance of the Law prevailed until Simeon appeared and reinstated it.

היה העולם משתומם עד שבא שמעון בן שמח והחזיר את התורה ליושנה Simeon, say the Karaites, being at that time the sole authority, introduced many innovations upon his return and changed the true interpretation of the Law. To enforce these new laws, he invented the fiction that besides the Written there is also an Oral Law given to Moses on Sinai and handed down from generation to generation, and that the laws proclaimed by him went back to this real tradition.

. The people followed him blindly. But some of them, knowing the false basis of these changes, rejected them and adhered to the ancient Tradition in all its purity; those were the Karaites.

adds that those who remained faithful to the original faith migrated מַנְבֵּר and only few of them, because of their attachment to the Temple, remained in Jerusalem. Yet, as Pinsker (II, 98) remarks, Elias himself put little confidence in this myth. For the origin of this legend, see A. Epstein Eldad ha-dani (Pressburg 1891), p. L. For later Karaites repeating this story, see Poznański, l. c., p. 163; comp. ZfhB., III, 92 (end) and 93, for the view of a tenth century Karaite (comp. ib., 90 and 172 ff.).

<sup>4</sup> As a striking instance of the purely mythological character of the Karaite beliefs about their origin and past, I shall illustrate the three strata in the development of the last mentioned Karaite theory of their origin. Sahl b. Maşliah (tenth century) asserts that Karaism goes back to the time of the second Temple, but connects it with no specific event (Pinsker, II, 35). This is still the opinion of Aaron b. Elias (fourteenth century)

On the other hand, most of the Mediæval Jewish scholars seem to agree that Karaism was due to a revival of the Sadducees (Abraham Ibn Daud) or that Sadducean elements are prominent in it (Saadia, Judah Halevi). Saadia Gaon (891-942) was the first to meet the Karaites in open battle and refute their claims for recognition. He states that Karaism is of recent origin (Pinsker, II, 19) and that Anan's breaking with Tradition was due entirely to in Introduction to his כתר תורה, 4a. Elias b. Moses Bashyazi a century later connects the schism with the name of Simeon b. Shatah and exclaims: או שהיה שמעון בן שמח נהרג כשאר חחכמים שנהרגו היינו כלנו לעם אחר (intr. to אדרת אליהו, Goslow 1834, 3a.). He is followed by his disciple Kaleb Afendopolo in his משרה מאמרות (quoted in דוד מרדכי, Wien 1830, 9a). The sixteenth century Karaite prodigy Moses b. Elias Bashyazi (born 1554 and said to have died 1572) amplified this tale by asserting in his ממה האלהים (quoted in דוד מרדכי, 9b ff.) that Judah b. Tabbai, who had also survived the king's wrath, opposed the innovations introduced by Simeon b. Shatah as also his fiction of an oral law. Judah attracted to his banner all those who remained faithful to ancient traditions. Simeon and Judah each became the head of a school, thus dividing the Jews into two factions. Simeon was succeeded by Abtalion, Abtalion by Hillel who systematized the new laws based on the fiction of the Oral Law. Judah b. Tabbai was followed by Shemaiah, and Shemaiah by Shammai; those two being the great Karaite teachers from whom the line of succession was never interrupted. Already Jepheth b. Said asserted that Shammai was the teacher of the Karaites (Pinsker, II, 186; comp. ib., I, 6); see also Luzzatto, כרם חמר, III (1838), 223; Geiger, ib., IV, 12; Gottlober, בקרת לתולדות הקראים. Wilna 1865, 5 ff. How foreign this idea was to the early Karaites, is seen from what Salman b. Yeruham says of Bet Shammai and Bet Hillel (כרם חמך) IV, 13): תועבת ה' גם שניהם.

<sup>5</sup> We know of two Rabbanites who combated Karaism before Saadia: the Gaon Natronai b. Hilai (סרר רב עמרם), 38a) and the Gaon Hai b. David (Harkavy, Studien u. Mittheilungen, V, 108, n. 2; comp. Bornstein, אוובל לנחום מאקאלאוו, Warsaw 1904, 158, n. 2, who believes this Gaon to have been Hai b. Nahshon). For anti-Karaite legislation by Jehudai Gaon see L. Ginzberg, Geonica, I, 111, n. 2. For Saadia's anti-Karaite writings, see Poznański, JQR., X, 238 ff., and additions, ib., XX, 232 ff.

personal motives (ib., 103). Yet he adds that the remnants of Zadok and Boethus joined Anan (l. c.). About two centuries later, a time which was decisive in the battle between traditional Judaism and the Karaites, the three great lights of Toledo, Judah Halevi, Abraham Ibn Ezra, and Abraham Ibn Daud, each strove to check the Karaite propaganda in Spain carried on at that time with great zeal by Ibn al-Taras, the disciple of Jeshua b. Judah, and they all assert that Karaism is an offshoot of Sadduceeism. Judah Halevi declares that the Karaite schism arose in the time of John Hyrcanus. The Karaites, says he, are superior to the Sadducees in questions of dogma, but agree with them in important religious questions. Abraham Ibn Ezra also identifies them with the Sadducees. In his commentaries on the Bible, which are strongly anti-Karaitic, he usually styles them¹o צרוקים. More emphatic is Abraham Ibn Daud in his Sefer Hakkabalah, where he says that "after the destruction of the Temple the Sadducees dwindled to almost nothing until Anan appeared and strengthened them." Likewise, Maimonides, commenting (Abot 1, 3) on the dissension of Zadok and Boethus, adds: "In Egypt they are called Karaites, while in the Talmud they are named Sadducees and Boethusians."

Elias b. Moses Bashyazi, a fifteenth century Karaite, tells us, in the introduction to his אדרת אליהו , 3a, that it is the opinion of all the Rabbanite scholars that the Karaite schism goes back to Zadok and Boethus.

Much confidence, however, was not placed in this testimony of the Mediæval Rabbanites, that the Karaites descended from the Sadducees, as it is evident that the Rabbanites were often actuated by the desire to stamp their opponents in the eyes of the people as descendants of that hated sect which denied divine Providence and resurrection.<sup>18</sup> In the middle of the last century Abraham

Geiger attempted to prove historically the descent of the Karaites from the Sadducees, and this view constitutes an essential part of his epoch-making theory concerning the internal development of post-exilic Judaism and the history of Jewish sects. His view is accepted by Holdheim, Fürst, Harkavy, Chwolson, and others. A general survey of Geiger's theory will help us better to understand the questions involved.

From the earliest times, says Geiger, two distinct, or, rather, antagonistic currents were at work shaping the history of Judaism. The dualism revealed itself in olden times in the divided nationality of Ephraim (or Joseph) and Judah. Ephraim constituted a worldly kingdom, in constant contact with the neighboring nations and, therefore, in need of a sacrificial and ceremonial religion and a powerful priesthood to protect it from the surrounding heathen influences. Judah, on the other hand, constituted a kingdom politically insignificant, compact and isolated, and less susceptible to foreign influences, with one national sanctuary and a less developed priesthood. Judah escaped the fate of Ephraim and awoke to new life in the sixth century B. C. With this new life came a struggle, in which priestly aristocracy and sacerdotal rule were antagonized by tendencies towards religious and political democracy that asserted themselves more and more. Since the establishment of the second commonwealth the priests ruled the nation. There stood at the head of the state a high-priest, descendant of the family of Zadok, the chief of the priesthood in the days of David and Solomon (I Kings, 1, 34; 2, 35; I Chron. 29, 22), members of which had exercised priestly functions ever since the building of Solomon's Temple. This family and those related to it constituted the nobility of the nation and since the Return controlled the secular as well as the religious life of the people.

This power, blended with the attribute of holiness, soon led the priestly ruling class to disregard the needs and demands of the people. They stood for the ancient laws and observances, which established and asserted their rights and prerogatives, admitting no modification which the times required. They also allied themselves with the Syrians and cultivated tastes and habits distasteful to the people. With the victory of the Maccabees the government and the high-priesthood passed over to the latter, the Sadducees, the old nobility, joining them. An opposition against them arose among the people, the leaders of which were known as the "Separated" (Perushim), descendants of those who in the days of Zerubbabel and again in the

An off-shoot of the Sadducees, and united with them were the Boethusians, a new aristocratic priestly family called after Simon b. Boethus, high-priest and father-in-law of Herod I (Urschrift. 102, 134 ff., 143 ff.). Herzfeld, Geschichte, II, 387, accepts the view of Azariah dei Rossi that the Boethusians are the Essenes spoken of by Philo and Josephus. time of Ezra separated themselves from heathen surroundings and influences (Ezra 6, 21; 9, 1; Neh. 9, 2). Their aim was to limit the power of priestly aristocracy and turn the government over to the people. The Pharisees recognized the sanctity of priesthood, but contested the centralization of secular power in the hands of the sacerdotal-aristrocratic families.

The difference between these two parties, originally small and of a general nature, widened in time. The spirit of rivalry in this politico-religious struggle brought about laws and regulations on the part of the Pharisees intended to check the authority and diminish the privileges of the priests. Personal purity and sanctity of all the people were to take the place of the sanctity of priesthood. The Pharisees devised new rules of interpretation which enabled them to limit and restrict the biblical laws establishing priestly rights. On the other hand, many laws of purity and observances concerning food, originally intended for the priests and the Temple, they made apply to all the people in and outside of the Temple.<sup>22</sup> So the Pharisees did not adhere to the letter of the Law, but taught and expanded the Law with regard to its inner spirit and the needs of the time, whereby they created a new Halakah differing in content as well as in spirit from the ancient, Sadducean, tradition." The majority of the people followed the new Halakah, but the Sadducean teachings found acceptance outside of Judah proper. The Samaritans, descendants of Northern Israel, were not allowed by the leaders of the national party in the time of Zerubbabel to participate in the further development of Judaism (Ezra

4, I ff.). The ancient feud between Ephraim and Judah thus revived. The rejected Samaritans who retained the ancient Israelitish tradition as well as the ancient interpretation of the Law, clung, like the Sadducees, to those traditions and stood for priestly prerogative, characteristic of the religion of Northern Israel and the Sadducees. This accounts for the many practices and interpretations of the law that are common to the Sadducees and the Samaritans.**

But, even in Judah, only the political antagonism between the Pharisees and the Sadducees ceased with the destruction of the Temple. The Sadducees, whose existence as the priestly aristocracy and ruling class depended upon the state and the Temple, ceased to control the life of the people. But the religious differences between these two parties did not disappear.

The victorious Pharisees, who ruled the day, rejected all traditions, preserved by the Sadducees, which tended to affirm the exclusive rights of the priests, and the whole body of traditional law was now made to conform to their views. Not all the Pharisaic teachers, however, agreed to these radical changes, and some of them retained their allegiance to the pre-Pharisaic Halakah. Notably among them are Shammai and his school represented by R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus and Jose the Galilean.<sup>26</sup>

But official Pharisaism did not heed them. It established as a religious norm the interpretations and laws which emanated from the school of Hillel, the great champion of Pharisaism, who began the systematization of the new Halakah. Hillel's work was firmly established by R. Akiba and brought to completion by Judah Ha-nasi. Two centuries later the center of Judaism was transferred to Babylonia, and soon all consciousness of an earlier and differing Halakah disappeared.<sup>20</sup>

Zealously as the Pharisees of the school of Hillel worked to exclude and annul the laws and traditions tainted with Sadducean views, traces of the latter are still found in some of the apocryphal books; in the Greek version of the Scriptures (LXX); in the Aramaic version, Pseudo-Jonathan; in the halakic midrashim from the school of R. Ishmael, himself a priest and with priestly sympathies, and, to a lesser extent, in the later Palestinian halakic works, Tosefta and Talmud Jerushalmi.

But not only are we able to reconstruct parts of the Sadducean Halakah through the traces in these works, but the Sadducean tradition is still alive, its laws are observed and its practices carried out by their descendants, the Karaites; not only are they the followers and spiritual heirs of the Sadducees, but their physical descendants. Doctrines and practices adhered to and observed by a nation do not disappear at the desire of its leaders. Nor were the Sadducees annulled. The descendants of the once dominant party continued to live according to the traditions of their ancestors. The religious unrest prevalent in the Islamic world in the eighth century caused them also to unite and defy their old enemies, the Pharisees. Their leader Anan gave them his name, which was, however, soon changed to the appellation סבני מקרא.

Karaism is, thus, not to be looked upon as a late-day revolt against the authority of Tradition caused by outside influence, but is a survival in a somewhat modified form (as by belief in resurrection) of the pre- and anti-Pharisaic tradition.**

D. Chwolson in his Beiträge zur Entwicklungsgeschichte d. Judenthums (Leipzig 1910) goes further than Geiger, and asserts that long after the destruction of the Temple, the Sadducees were predominant (pp. 10-22). He bases this view on the assumption that during the time of the Second Commonwealth the Sadducees constituted not only the priestly and secular aristocracy, but also the bulk of the people, their disappearance with the destruction of the State being therefore inconceivable (p. 23 ff.).

The reliability of the traditional account of the origin of the Sadducees and Boethusians (Abot de R. Nathan, ch. 5), rejected by Geiger (Urschrift, 105 ff.) as an apocryphal legend, was vindicated by Baneth in Magazin, IX (1882), p. 1-37; 61-95, where is also shown how far the view of Geiger—that the Sadducees did not reject Tradition but adhered to a more ancient interpretation of the Law—contradicts the explicit statements of Josephus (Ant. XIII, 10, 6; XVII, 1, 4) and all the Talmudic accounts about them.<sup>31</sup>

Before we enter into a discussion of the agreements between the Sadducees and the Karaites which serve Geiger as proofs of the relation of the latter to the former, a few words will not be amiss on the general difficulties connected with the hypothesis, which were ignored by the duty of reading the Shema', Its reading is enjoined by the later Karaites; see Hadassi, Alph. בור (15d); אדרת אליהו , 59c; see Weiss, דור , IV, 88; L. Löw. Ges. Schr., I, 50. Neither can the Am-haares be identified with the Sadducees by his non-observance of the law of Tefillin. The Sadducees accepted the literal interpretation of Deut. 6, 8 (see Weiss, I, 118; Fürst, Geschichte d. Karäerthums, I, 10; Graetz, III, 3, 395; comp. also Müller, Masechet Soferim, p. 21, note 66). The name אדוקי in Menahot 42b ספר misled Wreschner (Samaritanische Traditionen, Berlin 1888, intr., p. VIII) and J. A. Montgomery (The Samaritans,. Philadelphia 1908, 136) to believe that the Sadducees interpreted Deut. 6, 8 symbolically. צדוקי in Menahot (l. c.) is, as often in the Amoraic literature, equivalent to po, or was, as usual, substituted therefor by the censor. The parallel passage (Gittin 45b) reads passage instead of צרוקי, which is also the reading of Estori ha-Pharhi, בפתר ופרח, end of ch. 5. Harkavy (מבר המצות לענן, 142, n. 12) believes that Anan interpreted Deut. 6, 9 literally but referred וכחבתם to the עשרת הדברות a view which is held also by the Falashas (Epstein, Eldad ha-Dani, 174).

Geiger. Geiger believes that all the differences between the Fharisees and the Sadducees may be brought under one unifying principle, viz., the advocacy of priestly interests by the Sadducees. But if this was the distinctive mark of the Sadducees, what import could this tendency have had many centuries after the destruction of the Temple, when there was no more priestly aristocracy nor prerogative? And how could this issue sustain and keep alive Sadduceism under the appellative קראים until to-day? Nor can we comprehend how Karaism whose basic principle since the days of its first exponent Anan was חפשו באורייתא שפיר "Search the Scripture," interpret it according to your own reason, and act accordingly," ignoring tradition, how Karaism could have descended from Sadduceism which, as Geiger himself asserts, was by its very nature conservative, adhering stringently to ancient tradition.

This Sadducean-Karaite theory of Geiger is closely connected with his hypothesis concerning the existence of an ancient Halakah related to the Sadducean and which was therefore suppressed by the later Pharisees, a view that has been accepted by many scholars. A brief discussion of this hypothesis in relation to Karaism is given here.

The Targum Pseudo-Jonathan on the Pentateuch is, as Geiger (Urschrift, 162 ff., 451 ff.; N. S., IV, 106 ff.; V (Heb.), 112 ff.) believes, the main depository of remnants and traces of this ancient Sadducean-Samaritan-Karaite Halakah. Ps.-Jon., being a product of Palestine at a time when the more ancient Sadducean traditions had not altogether died out there—though changed to conform to the New Halakah—, still contains much which goes back to those ante-Pharisaic traditions. As proof of this view, Geiger (Urschrift, 176 ff.) attempted to show that several Karaite anti-traditional laws are found among the Samaritans and in Ps.-Jon. The following are the main points of agreement which Geiger finds between the Karaite law and the Targum Pseudo-Jonathan and which he therefore believes to be survivals of the ancient halakah.

According to the traditional interpretation of Lev. 19, 24, the fruit of a tree in its fourth year is, like the "second tithe," to be consumed by the owner within the walls of Jerusalem. This is also the view of Josephus, Ant., IV, 8, 19. Pseudo-Jonathan, however, translates הלולים להי so also on Deut. 20, 6. The Samaritans and Karaites also take מרו הלולים to mean that it is to be given to the priest or redeemed by its owner. Geiger (Urschrift, 181-184) believes this to have been the view of the ancient Halakah. Since this interpretation agrees with the plain meaning of סרש הלולים (comp. Ibn Ezra ad loc.), there is no necessity to assume with Geiger that this interpretation by some "Karaites goes back to an ancient tradition.

According to Tradition, two tithes were to be taken every year (except the sabbatical year). The "first tithe" (Num. 18, 21 ff.) and the "second tithe" (Deut. 14, 22 ff.) are to be taken in the first, second, fourth, and fifth years; the "first tithe" and the tithe for the poor (Deut. 26, 12 ff.) in the third and sixth years of every cycle of seven years. As was already pointed out by M. What Ps.-Jon. adds to the translation of the text is entirely in agreement with tradition (Sifre, II, 109 and 302) that in the שנת הבעור all the tithes from the last three years must be removed, the first tithe given to the Levite and the "second tithe" carried to Jerusalem. <sup>36</sup> Geiger, on the basis of his theory that R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus and R. Ishmael represent the ancient Halakah related to Sadducean Tradition (see above), sees also in every agreement of Ps.-Jon. with the interpretation of R. Eliezer or R. Ishmael ancient laws, which were changed by the school of R. Akiba (Urschrift, 447, 472 ff.; Nachg. Schriften, IV, 106-7). It was however shown by Gronemann (119, note 2; see also 103, note; 139-140, notes; comp. also Epstein, MGWJ., XL (1896), 142) that Ps.-Jon. does not always follow the interpretation of the school of R. Ishmael against that

An agreement between Pseudo-Jonathan and many Karaites, not noticed by Geiger, is their interpretation of Lev. 18, 21 ומועך לא תתן להעביר למלך ומוערי למלך ומוערי ממר מווער מווער לא תתן להעביר למלך ונוי... פתרון 23; Hadassi (Alph. 324): שני אמר ומורעך לא תתן להעביר למלך ונוי... פתרון העב"ו see ib.. Alph. 278, 313 and 364; see also המר חורה, ad loc. (49a). This interpretation, though censured in the Mishnah (Megillah 3, 9; comp. חנא רבי רבי ישמעאל (Megillah 25a; p. Sanhedrin 9, 7, see also Sifre II, 171) and as Friedmann, Bet Talmud, I, 336-7 (comp. This verse, as Frankel (Einfluss, 156) remarks, gave rise to many divergent interpretations. Anan also interpreted this verse allegorically; see Harkavy, ספר המצוח לענן, 207, and Schechter, Jewish Sectaries, II, 32. The Karaites agree with Ps.-Jon. to Lev. 1, 4 and 3, 2, (against Sifra to 16, 21; Menahot 93a; Tosefta ib., 10, 3; so also Philo, II, 241) that סמיכת קרבן is with the right hand only. See Mibhar, Lev., 3a: ידו: הימנית... בידו האחת יסמוך לשעיר המשתלח ואשר אמרו בעלי הקבלה ואין סמיכה בשתי ידים רק על שעיר המשתלח ואשר אמרו בעלי הקבלה ואין סמיכה בשתי ידים רק על שעיר המשתלח ואשר אמרו בעל קבלחם on Lev. 1, 4 (3b, end). But see D. Hoffmann, Zur Einleitung in die halachischen Midraschim, Berlin 1887, p. 75, who contends that this interpretation of Ps.-Jon. (which is also favored by the נששה; see Ibn Ezra on Lev. 1, 4) goes back to the school of R. Ishmael.

Ps.-Jon. translates אשה חדשה in Deut. 24, 5, against Sifre ad. loc. and Soṭah 44a, by הרתא חדשה. This is also the interpretation of חדשה by many Karaites. See נו עדן 154b: און עדן אבל אלמנה ובאמרו אשה חדשה רומו בזה שלא נשאת עדיין... אבל אלמנה So also בתר תורה So also או גרושה מן הנשואין לא חקרא אשה חדשה, ad loc. (27b). See, however, Mibhar ad loc. (20b). Samuel al-Magrabi (MS. 95a) states that the Karaites are divided on the interpretation of הדשה הדשה. This deviation of Ps.-Jon. and some of the Karaites from the talmudic interpretation of חדשה rests on the plain meaning of that word. See Ibn Ezra ad loc.; comp. Gronemann, l. c., p. 67.

While, as we have seen, the proofs adduced by Geiger do not establish relationship between the ancient Halakah, believed by him to be contained in Pseudo-Jonathan, and the Karaite Halakah, the following consideration, not hitherto noted, arises against any attempt at connecting the Karaite law with the ancient Sadducean Halakah which is believed to be represented in Ps.Jon.:

If the deviation of Ps.-Jon. from our Halakah go back to ancient tradition related to Sadduceism, then we should expect the Karaites—a later name for Sadduceism, according to this view—to be in agreement with such deviations of Ps.-Jon. The following examination of the main halakic divergences of Ps.-Jon. from our Halakah and of the view of the Karaites on these points will show how untenable this view is.**

According to Tradition (Mekilta, Mishpaṭim, 1, ed. Fried., 74b; Arakin 18b; p. Ķiddushin 59a; Maim. עברים, 4, 4) the seventh year in which the Jewish male or female

Comp. ib., p. 48, in reference to Deut. 17, 5, אל שעריך, which is the interpretation of the רבנן in p. Sanhedrin 6, 1. See also Onkelos, ad loc., and Ps.-Jon. on Deut. 22, 24; comp. MGWJ., LII (1908), 217, note 1. This also explains Ps.-Jonathan's rendering of Lev. 11, 11 שקצו את נכלתם שקצו by וית ניבלתהון which Hoffmann (ZfhB., VII, 1903, 47; comp. Reifmann, Bet Talmud, I, 314) considers to be anti-traditional. But see p. Shebiit 7, 1: כתיב ממאים הם [לכם] מה ת"ל וממאים יהיו לכם אלא אחד the meaning of which, as is evident from what follows there, is that איסורי אכילה are not to be made objects for trade and gain (see b. Pesahim 23a). Ps.-Jon. in his ומן הנייתהון thus follows the Jerushalmi; comp. also the fragment of a commentary to p. slave is to be released (Ex. 21, 2; Deut. 15, 12) refers not to the Sabbath year (שנת השממה ), but to the seventh year from the commencement of their servitude. Ps.-Jon., however, seems to interpret יבשבעת "the sabbatical year" (Ps.-Jon. to Ex. 21, 7; 22, 2; but see Ps.-Jon. to Ex. 21, 2 and to Deut. 15, 12). The Karaites differing among themselves on the laws of slavery agree with Tradition that ובשבעת refers to the seventh year of servitude. See ישראל שנמכר לא יעבוד יותר משש שנים . Id: ישראל שנמכר לא שש שנים יעבר ובשבעת יצא לחפשי חנם; Samuel al-Magrabi (S. Geiger holds (Urschrift, 190 ff.) that the ancient Halakah did not distinguish between paid and gratuitous guardians, as does Tradition (B. M. 93a) but made the difference in responsibility depend on the nature of the goods entrusted. It referred Ex. 22, 6-8 to things light in which case the guardian is liable only for lack of ordinary care, and verses 8-13 to things heavy for which the guardian is responsible even if they were stolen. Ps.-Jon. taking vs. 9-11, against the talmudic interpretation (Mekilta, ad loc.; Baba Mesi'a 94b) as referring to a gratutious guardian בלא אור נטיר and v. 11, with the Talmud, to a paid guardian דהוה ליה עטיה אור נטיר, represents according to Geiger (ib.) an intermediate state in the development of the law of guardians.

All the later Karaites accept fully the traditional interpretation of Ex. 22, 6-15 as referring to four kinds of guardians, so Mibhar, ad loc., 44b-45a; התר תורה, ad loc., 75a-b; דין ארבעה שומרים, גן עדן, 182b-184c; Samuel al-Magrabi, MS., 136a ff.

The Karaites, however, agree with Tradition in the interpretation of איש מהור (so also Philo II, 253); and Mibhar (ad loc., 18b) records the opinion of some Karaites that even שרפת פרה (v. 5), which according to Tradition is (see note 43), does not require a priest:

ויש אומרים השורף יתכן להיותו כהן או זולת כהן
Ps.-Jon. adds to יוציא מחוץ למחנה (Lev. 16, 27) the words על יריהון דטליא דכהניא which is against the Halakah, as Büchler (Die Priester und der Cultus, 153) remarks. The Karaites agree with Tradition. See Mibhar, aa loc. (28a):

יוציא אל מחוץ למחנה: יוציא רמוציא ולא כהן."
Ps.-Jon. differs from Tradition, Yoma 6, 6, in the interpretation of רשלח את השעיר (Lev. 16, 22) in ascribing the death of the goat to non-human agency. Geiger (N. S., V, Heb., 115) believes this to have been the ancient interpretation (failing, however, to indicate the reason that According to Tradition שלמי נדר ונדבה (Lev. 7, 16-18) are eaten only two days and the night between (Sifra ad loc.; Zebahim 5, 7; Pesahim 3a; Maimon., מעשה הקרבנות, 10, 6). It construes וממחרת והנותר (v. 16) so that יאכל refers to ממחרת. Ps.-Jon. refers יאכל to the night after the second day so that שלמים are eaten two days and two nights (comp. Ps.-Jon. to Lev. 19, 6). The Karaites are divided on this question. See Mibhar, ad loc. (11b): . ממחרת . שנאכלים לשני ימים ולילה אחד והנותר מבשר הזבח ביום ...השלישי באש ישרף: ביום השלישי דבק עם באש ישרף לא עם והנותר... But see בתר תורה, ad. loc. (18b): והנה שלמי נדר ונדבה נאכלים לשני ימים ושתי לילות לא שני ימים ולילה אחת... הוא הדיו נם בשלמי נדר שיום המחרת תופש גם הלילה של אחריו. In a fragment of a commentary on Lev. which Schechter published in his Saadyana, 144 ff., the author of which Schechter believes to be the famous ninth century Karaite Daniel al Ķumsi, the same view is held (ib., p. 146): " בנו "בנו"... גדר ונדבה יאכל ממחרת וליל שלישי...

<sup>45</sup> Aaron b. Elias, however, contradicts himself. See און ג', fol. 39c. 1. 7 from bottom: חשלמים נאכלין לשני ימים ולילה אחרו. Philo, as is evident from the third reason given by him for the law of Lev. 19, 6 (II, 245), agrees with Ps.-Jon. See also Geiger, Nachg. Schr., IV, 38; Reifmann, Bet Talmud, I, 314. Chwolson, Das letste Passamahl Christi, 35, believes this to have been the Sadducean view; comp. ib., 32, 34. The interpretation of Ps.-Jon. seems to have escaped Chwolson. Another Karaite view is found in the fragment mentioned in the text. Daniel says that the words ארם כי יקריב מכם (Lev. 1, 2) excluded Gentiles from bringing any sacrifices to be offered for them in the Temple. Other Karaites hold the same view (Mibhar, Lev. 39a, and חמיב דעת ad loc., חורת תורה, ad loc., חורת מבול by the Karaite

Ps.-Jon. interprets ולא ירבה לו סוסים (Deut. 17, 16) to mean that he should not have more than two horses (לא יסנון ליה על חרין סוסוון ליה על חרין סוסוון ליה על חרין סוסוון אוויד) which is against the talmudic interpretation that the King is not to keep more horses than he actually needs (Sifre, ad loc., 105b; Sanhedrin 21a, comp. Brüll, Bet Talmud, II, 25-26). The Karaites agree with the talmudic interpretation. See Mibhar, ad loc. (14b): אולא ירבה לו סוסים אלא כדי מרכבתו:

Tradition interprets ומת הנביא (Deut. 18, 19) as death by strangulation (Sanhedrin 10, 1; Sifre, ad loc., 108a). Ps.-Jon. translates death by sword. The Karaites agree with Tradition. See כתר תורה, ad loc. (22a): אך הנביא אשר יויד: זהו נביא שקר ונם יכלול מי שהוא מן מננבי דברי אך הנביא אשר יויד. זהו נביא שקר ונם יכלול מי שהוא מן מננבי דברי  $^{47}$

As was already remarked by Jonathan Eibeschütz (אורים ותומים) Ps.-Jon. in his translation of Deut, 24, 1 יכתוב לה ספר תירוכין קדם בי דינא requires the presence of a court for the execution of a bill of divorce. I will now turn to the differences known or supposed to have existed between the Sadducees and the Pharisees and examine Karaite halakah on these disputed points.

The interpretation of Lev. 16, 12-14 constituted one of the earliest differences between the Pharisees and the Sadducees. The Sadducean view and practice was (l'osefta Yoma 1, 7) that the kindling of incense in the vessel (v. 13) was to take place before the high-priest entered the Holy of Holies, maintaining that otherwise the high-priest when entering it would see the Ark,—which contravenes הכפרות של חכפרת (v. 2). The Pharisaic ruling and practice was that the incense is to be put on the coals in the Holy of Holies itself (T. K. Ahare Mot, 3; Tosefta Yoma 1, 7; Yoma 19b; 53a; p. ib., 1, 5 (39a)). The Karaites agree with the Pharisaic interpretation of these verses. See Mibhar, ad loc. (27a): הכנסו מיד שלא יראה הכפרת ננתנה על המחכה כנראה שקמורת מכניסה על ירי כלי אחר ובהכנסו נותנה על המחכה.

בפניו (Deut. 25, 9) constituted a difference between the Pharisees and the Sadducees, is admitted by Geiger (Jüdische Zeitschrift, II, 28; comp. ib., 95). The latter in their adherence to the letter of the Law required the יבמה to spit in his face (ממש) while the Pharisees in case of halisah caused her to spit before him (Yebamot 106b). The Karaites agree with the Pharisees in the interpretation of וירקה בפניו בארץ "See Mibhar, ad loc. (22a) יורקה בפניו בארץ, ad loc.

The responsibility of a master for damage caused to others by his servants constituted, as already recorded in Mishnah (Yadaim 4, 7), an issue between the Pharisees and Sadducees. The latter applied the law of Ex. 21, 35 also to damage done by one's servants. The Karaites agree with the Pharisees and reason like them. See גון עדן (180c): מארונים משלמין אבל הם (180c): מארונים משלמין אבל הם הבעל או הארון ... שבל במה שיש תשלומין אינו רין שיפרע הבעל או הארון פטורים ... אבל במה שיש תשלומין אינו רין שיפרע הבעל או הארון איין להקיש נוקי העבר בנוקי השור כי העבר יש לו דעת ואפשר שירע לבבו משלם ישרא משלם (Comp. G. Hölscher, Der Sadduzäismus (Leipzig 1906), 30 ff.; Geiger, Urschrift, 143 ff.

The Pharisees and the Sadducees differed on the law of inheritance. According to Num. 27, 8 when there are sons and daughters, the sons are the heirs. But if the son died before his father, the son leaving a daughter, the Sadducees held that the daughter shares with her brother's daughter the inheritance. The Pharisees held that the son and all his descendants, male or female, should precede the daughter in the right of inheritance (Meg. Taanit 5, אי See Rapoport, דברי שלום ואמת (Prag. 1861), 11 ff.; Weiss, I, 117, note 2. Josephus (Ant. IV, 8, 23) translates with the Sadducees וירקא באפיוו. Comp. also Testament of Twelve Patriarchs, Zebulun, 3, 4, ff.

(Neubauer, II, 10); Tosefta Yadaim 2, 20; Baba Batra 115b-116a; p. ib., 8, 1).

The Karaite law of inheritance, as they themselves confess (גן עדן, 165b), is confused, and difference of opinion exists among them on essential points. The prominent ninth century Karaite, Daniel al Kumsi, held that the daughter when sons are left receives a third of the inheritance (Pinsker, II, 85; comp. אדרת אליהו, 101a). Joseph b. Abraham ha-Kohen was of the opinion that the daughter's right to inheritance is equal to the son's (ib., 101c; גן עדן 165d); this, he reports in the name of David b. Boaz, was also the view of many others. These views disagree with <sup>51</sup> See V. Aptowitzer, Die syrischen Rechtsbücher und das Mosaisch-Talmudische Recht. Wien 1909, 82. His assertion that the law of Timotheos quoted there is Sadducean is mistaken. The equal rights of a daughter's son and another daughter's daughter never constituted an issue between the Pharisees and the Sadducees.

15 Wreschner, 41, suggests that it was taken by some of the Karaites from the Samaritans, who follow the Mohammedan law and give the daughter, when there is a son, a third of the inheritance. The Karaite law: למשחת בנימין, לו הגדול המשרת המקרש (Benjamin Nahawendi, סמשחת בנימין, 3d; so also Hadassi, Alph. 369) might have also been borrowed from the Samaritans (see Wreschner, 42). For a similar view, see Schechter, Jewish Sectaries, I, p. 9, lines 14-15. Tradition makes no provision for the case of a man dying without heirs and considers it impossible (Sifre to Num. 5, 8; Baba kamma 109a). According to Philo (II, 291) the tribe inherits his property.

the Sadducean as well as with the Pharisaic practice. Those Karaites who do accept the traditional view that daughters do not share with sons in inheritance,—and this is the view of nearly all later Karaites (Hadassi, Alph. 252, 256; נו עדן, 166a, and מבחר מחה and בתר תורה to Num. 27, 8)—agree also with the Pharisees against the Sadducees, that the son's children, female as well as male, are the sole heirs even when the deceased has left daughters. See Hadassi, Alph. 252 and 256: אמר ובן אין לו והעברתם את 256: שחרונו בן קודם לבת וכל יוצאי ירכו של בן קודמים נחלתו לבתו בתורחך: "פתרונו בן קודם לבת וכל יוצאי ירכו של בן קודמים; so also הרת אליהו סור הבן, בין זכר ובין נקבה (Num. 41b: קודמין מן הבת הבן, בין זכר ובין נקבה (Num. 41b: קודמין מן הבת Hadassi (Alph. 97) informs us that the Sadducees "absolutely forbade divorce." Geiger (Zeitschrift, 1836, p. 99) doubted the authenticity of this report. Ķirķisani reports it in the name of David b. Merwan Almukames (ed. Harkavy, 304, l. 3; 305, l. 12). S. Holdheim in his מאמר האישות (Berlin 1861, p. 43 ff.) finds support for this assertion in the fact that the Karaites, who, as he believes with Geiger, descend from Sadducees, also prohibit divorce except in case of suspicion of adultery in the wife, and quotes (p. 53, note) אדרת אליהו. Holdheim, however, misstated the facts. The author of אדרת אליהו (96c) as well as all the other later Karaites (Hadassi, Alph. 366 (141c); and כחר הורה on Deut. 24, 1; Gan Eden 154d and (A. "intolerable thing" as, for instance, the wife's becoming (after the marriage) deaf or blind or contracting an incurable disease; anything of such a nature is legitimate cause for divorce. But even this view was rather an innovation of later Karaites. As we now know, according to Anan, marriage may be dissolved at the wish of either of the parties, by a writ of divorce. See his חשבר המצוח ספר המצוח ובעיניו כי מצא בה ערות: (Harkavy, 119): דבר ראי לא שפרא בעיניה ראשכח בה מיגלי סניחא ולא ניחא ליה בנוה דיא לא ביי כה הוא ובין דלא צביא ביה היא

Benjamin Nahawendi (משאת בנימין, 5b), considered the right of divorce to be vested in the husband alone. Samuel al Magrebi tells us of the following three opinions among the Karaites as to the husband's right of divorce. He says (MS. 97b): דע כי התחלפו בר בר מדם מו אחר בר בר מדם מו הדבר מהם מי אמר כי ישוב להדת וענינו לא תמצא חחרכמים בזה הדבר מהם מי אמר כי ישוב להדת וענינו לא תמצא חבעיניו לאשר מצא בה כי היא מקלה במצות .... ומהם אמר כי זה המאמר ימנע האיש כי תמצא המשה חן בעיניו ואין הבדל אם יהיה המום מפני דרכי הדת אם מפני הדרכי העולם מפני היצירה או הצורה ומהם מי לא ישים זה המאמר תנאי בגרוש כי בדעתם מאז יאמר אני שנאתי [את אשתי] יאָמֵר לו תן לה המוהר המאוחר שלה ותגרשנה וגם ראיתי את אנשי זמני דורכים בזה המוהר המאוחר שלה ותגרשנה וגם ראיתי את אנשי זמני דורכים בזה המוהר

See Harkavy in Grätz, Geschichte, V4, 487. This view of Anan seems to have escaped Poznański, ZfhB., XI (1907), 72. It is possible that Anan in this law raised to the dignity of a biblical law the חקנה מורדת פחברת מורדת בשנות מורדת בשנות המורדת בשנות בשנות

The practice of the Karaites of his day thus coincided with the opinion of R. Akiba** (Gittin 90a): אַבּילו מצא אחרת

The preparation of the Red Heifer was, according to Num. 19, 9, to be done by one ceremonially clean: מחור ואסף איש מהור The interpretation of איש מהור constituted one of the essential differences between the Pharisees and Sadducees. The Pharisees considered the unclean man who has bathed in the day time, and awaits sunset, in accordance with Lev. 22, 7, to be מהור and eligible to prepare the ashes of the Red Heifer. The Sadducees considered him unclean

55 Still more erroneous is the assertion of Holdheim (J. c., 57 ff.), that the Karaites considering the marital bond similar to that of God and Israel allow the husband to forgive and take back an adulterous wife, while Tradition demands the dissolution of the marriage by a writ of divorce. The reverse is true. According to the Karaite law, even the אנוסה is considered defiled and forbidden to her husband whereas the talmudic law requires divorce only in case the husband be a priest (Ketubbot 51b; the reason of the opinion of אבוה דשמואל (l. c.) is שמא סופה ברצון; for Ps.-Jon. on Deut. 22. 26: אמרי בינה, see Chayes, אלא גברא יפטירינה מיניה בגיטא, 9; comp. also שערי צדק, IV, 4, 4). Holdheim (1. c., 112) contends that the Sadducees did not consider a captive even when אשת להן defiled. Yet the Karaites hold that even an is forbidden to her husband. See Hadassi, Alph. 365 (141d). Josephus (Contra Apionem I, 7) agrees with Tradition (Ketubbot 27a). Holdheim (1. c., 53, note) states that while the Karaites consider man and woman equal in their spiritual duties, the Mishnah (Berakot 3, 2) confines the duty of prayer to man. The very Mishnah which he quotes states that women are included in the obligation of prayer.

and barred him from assisting in the preparation of it."
This issue could have arisen only if we interpret חיה לפנות

Most of the Karaites, however, take לפנות ערב to mean the last part of the day and assign the ablution to the hour which immediately precedes sunset, see Harkavy, ספר המצות לענן, 143, n. 9; see also כתר תורה, ad loc. one who has bathed (for purification) in the day time—does not exist at all; the Karaites thus differ in the question of מבול יום as much from the Sadducees as they do from the Pharisees.

The law of false witnesses constituted one of the earliest differences between the Pharisees and the Sadducees. The latter restricted the application of Deut. 19, 19 to the case when the accused has already been executed in consequence of their false testimony. The Pharisaic view and practice were that false witnesses are liable to equal punishment after the judgment had been passed but not carried out (Sifre, ad loc., ed. Friedmann, 109b; Makkot, 1, 6; Tosefta Sanhedrin 6. 6; p. ib., 6, 3 and parallels).

Geiger (Urschrift, 140) and Weiss (I, 138) consider apporryphal the report of the Baraita Makkot 5b that the Pharisees did not apply the law of false witnesses in case the wrongly accused was already executed. The issue between the Pharisees and Sadducees was, according to them, the case where the testimony was found to be false before the execution of the alleged offender.<sup>58</sup>

The two daily burnt offerings (עולת תמיד) being pubic offerings, had to be provided at the expense of the public, from the הרומת הלשכה of the half-shekel tax (Shekalim 4, 1; Sifre I, 142). The Sadducees claimed (basing it on the singular form את הכבש אחר תעשה in Num. 28, 4) that the daily burnt offerings may be offered by individuals. Menahot 65a and Megillat Taanit, 11 (Neubauer, Mediaeval Jewish Chronicles, II, 3): שהיו צדוקים אומרים מביאים תמידים מכיא שתי שבתות חה מביא שלשים יום ; משל יחיד זה מביא שבת אחר וחה מביא שתי שבתות חה מביא שלשים יום ; comp. Geiger, Urschrift, 136.

The Karaites, in agreement with the Pharisees, consider the perpetual offering a public sacrifice to be offered at the expense of the people, though they hold that, in all duties incumbent on the people at large, if an individual anticipates it, the duty is discharged. See Mibhar to Ex.

The view of Geiger (Jüdische Zeitschrift, I, 24; Nachgelassene Schr., V, Heb., 161; ZDMG., XX, 560 and elsewhere; comp. Poznański, REJ., XLV, 63) that the Samaritan interpretation of Deut. 25, 5 ff., which was also held by some early Karaites, goes back to the Sadducees, cannot be accepted. The Samaritans took החתיה (v. 5) to be an adjective, referring to אשת המת translating it "the outer wife," i. e. the betrothed who had not as yet entered her husband's house, and restricted the law of levirate marriage to the betrothed woman whose husband died without living issue (Kiddushin 75b-76a; p. Yebamot 1, 6 and Gittin 1, 4; comp. Frankel, Vorstudien, 197, note b). If the Sadducees, like the Samaritans, would have applied the law of vibbum only to the betrothed, but not to the widowed wife, marriage would have been prohibited with them, as the cause of the exclusion of the Samaritans from the Iewish community and of marriage being prohibited with them, was that they referred the law of levirate marriage to the betrothed only. See Kiddushin 75b.

An agreement of great importance, as Geiger thinks, between the Sadducees and the Karaites is their rejection of the device known as 'erub, by which restraint on walking and carrying on the sabbath is lightened. Geiger sees in the institution of 'erub a result of the Pharisaic desire to imitate the priestly sacerdotal meals eaten in חבורות. The sacrificial meals constituted a religious act. To afford the priests an opportunity to assemble for such repasts, which were usually held on holidays and sabbath, the regulations concerning walking distances and carrying food from one precinct to another (מרשות לרשות) were disre-The Pharisees also instituted common repasts garded. (originally of companies of ten peoople, as in the eating of the Paschal Lamb). These meals, though of profane food, מלין, were eaten על מהרת הקדש and in connection with them were practised rites and observances usually associated with sacerdotal meals. To facilitate such gatherings, i. e. participation by those who lived outside the city limits in such consecrated meals (usually held on holy days), they devised the fiction of 'erub, through which members could come from distances and food be carried from one precinct to another on sabbath. The Sadducees opposed this device (Erubin 6, 2; ib., 68b). The rejection of this "evasion law" by the Samaritans (Erubin 31b) and the Karaites (Hadassi, Alphabeta 182, 183, 242, see also authors quoted below) thus goes back to their common source—the Sadducees. hypothesis of Geiger is due to misunderstanding the above quoted Mishnah. As has been shown by I. Halevy in his Dorot Ha Rishonim (1c, pp. 436 ff.; so also Weiss, Dor, I, 119), the Sadducees are mentioned there as מי שאינו מודה

Geiger (Jüd. Zeitschr., II (1863), 43 ff.) holds that the Sadducees prohibited the sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb סחד) on sabbath. Derenbourg (Orientalia, I, 184 ff.), Holdheim (מאמר האישות, 160 ff.), Chwolson (Das letzte Passamahl Christi, Leipzig 1908, 28 ff., 140, 161; comp. Bacher, JQR., VI, 680 ff. and REJ., XLV, 176 ff.) claim that the similar view held by Anan and some other early Karaites goes back to the Sadducees. See against this view A. Schwarz, Die Controversen der Schammaiten und Hilleliten, I, Wien 1893, p. 17, note. It may also be pointed out that it is hardly probable that the Sadducees distinguished, as Geiger (l. c.) and Chwolson (l. c., 21; 29, n. 2; 43, 140) claim, between the "perpetual offering" קרבן תמיד) as a public offering (קרבן צבור), and the קרבן מסח as a private offering (קרבן יחיד), since, according to the Sadducees themselves, the קרבו תמיד was also to be offered by an individual. See Menahot 65a; comp. Geiger, Urschrift 136, and above. Moreover, many early Karaite authorities agree with Tradition that the קרבן פסח takes precedence over the sabbath. So Benjamin Nahawendi סה"ם לענן), 153; comp. also the views of Daniel al Kumsi and Jepheth b. Ali, Harkavy, l. c.). So also Aaron b. Joseph (Mibhar, Exod. 16b); Samuel al Magrabi (ed.

שמור The Karaites differ among themselves also on the source of הוצאה on sabbath. Jepheth b. Ali (Pinsker, II, 21) and Joseph al Başir (אדרת אליהו), 29d ff.) follow Tradition and consider it to be a מלאכה and therefore forbidden. Kirkisani thinks that carrying is not מלאכה and its prohibition is traditional and attested by Jerem. 17, 22 (דון ערן, 26b; comp. also the views of Joshua b. Judah and of Aaron b. Elias, גן ערן, גן ערן, גו (גין ערן, 1, c.). Levi b. Jepheth stands alone in his opinion that the carrying of light things is not forbidden (אורת אליהו).

Geiger (Nachgel. Schriften, III, 315; V, Heb., 149 ff.; ZDMG., XVI, 717 ff.; comp. Cohn, ZDMG., XLVII, 678) holds that the Karaite view that עור נבלה, like בשר נבלה, communicates uncleanness goes back to Sadducean Tradi-It escaped Geiger that the earliest Karaites, the Ananites, were of the opinion that no separate part of the carcass is capable of communicating uncleanness. ארת אליהו (על שיעור הנבלה: .beg.: אדרת אליהו מהם אמרו והם הענניים שנבלה בכלל תאמר על כלל הגוף המת אמנם חלקי המת לא יקרא נבלה .... והנה לפי דעתם אם יכרת אבר אחד מהבהמה לא תקרא נבלה. So also גן עדן, 99b, end; comp. also JQR., XIX, 151, l. 11; for Anan's opinion see also Jacob b. Reuben (Pinsker, II, 84); Harkavy, סה״מ לענן 59; 153, n. 12; Schechter, Jewish Sectaries, II, 23; comp. also REJ., XLV, 56, n. 4. See also Geiger, Urschrift, 135, that the Boethusians allowed ספרים תפילין ומוחות to be written on which proves their agreement with Tradition that מממא is not מממא. Geiger's interpretation of Shabbat 108a (N. S., V, Heb., 151) is forced; comp. also Schorr, החלוץ, IV, 33.

The view of Geiger (Jüd. Zeitschr, I, 51; II, 27; N. S., III, 316; V, Heb., 138 ff.; 163 ff.) that the Samaritan and Karaite interpretation of Lev. 12, 4, 5 (מים מהרה) goes back to the Sadducees is not proved. See Wreschner, l. c., 38, in favor of whose view it may be pointed out that the Book of Jubilees (3, 13) seems to agree with Tradition that a woman during ימי מהרה is excluded only from ביאת מקרש see also Schwarz, l. c., 94 ff.

The only view common to the Boethusians (a latterday Sadduceeism) and the Karaites is the interpretation of ממחרת השבח and the time of the Feast of Weeks. The Feast of Weeks is, according to Lev. 23, 15-16, to be observed on the fiftieth day after the waving of the sheaf. The "wave-sheaf," אומר השבח יניפנו הכהן. Tradition interprets ממחרת השבת "from the day after the holy convocation," i. e. from Nisan the sixteenth. The Boethusians interpreted name to mean the day after the weekly sabbath that occurs during the feast of the unleavened bread, so that Pentecost is celebrated always on the first day of the week (Menahot 65a; Megillat Taanit 1, 2; Sifra on Lev. 23, 15 and parallels). This is also the Samaritan and Karaite interpretation of השבח השבח.

But to adduce this Karaite view as evidence of the Karaite descent from the Sadducees is hardly justifiable. As Geiger himself (Urschrift, 138-139); Wellhausen (Die Pharisäer und die Sadducäer, 59 ff.); Schürer (II, 334); Poznański (Abraham Geiger, Leben u Lebenswerk, 365) pointed out, this Boethusian interpretation of סמחרת השבת does not go back to Sadducean tradition but originated in the animosity of the Boethusian priests-aristocrats against the Pharisees after having been deprived by them of their

See Wreschner, Intr., XXIII; S. Hanover, Das Festgesets der Samaritaner nach Ibrahim ibn Ja'kab, Berlin 1904, text, p. VII; comp. ib., 62-63; Geiger, Nachg. Schr., III, 294-296. The Samaritans and the Karaites differ, however, in the following essential question, namely, when to count if the fifteenth of Nisan occurs on Sunday. The Karaites begin on it to count the seven weeks. The Samaritans would begin counting on the first of the next week and thus offer the Thin post festum. See Geiger, l. c., 296; Hoffmann, Levisicus, II, 164. For the Falashas, see A. Epstein, Eldad ha-Dani, 154 ff.; id., REJ., XXII (1891), 13 ff.

prerogative to regulate the calendar and was never carried out in practice.

The only agreement between the Sadducees and the Karaites known to us is their rejection of "water libation," נסוך המים, on the Feast of the Tabernacles. See Jefeth b. Ali (Pinsker, II, 23): נסוך המים לא צוה יושב הכרובים לא בפנים לא בפנים לא בחוצה: האומרים במצות נסוך המים הוסיפו על מאמרו הוא הדבר לא בחוצה: האומרים במצות נסוך see also Mibhar, Num. 28b, and סירת כסף ad loc.

Thus, as we have seen, in all the differences between the Sadducees and Pharisees recorded in Talmud and Megillat Taanit the Karaite halakah (as far as Karaite opinion is known to us), with the exception of ממחרת השבת, either agrees with the Pharisees against the Sadducees, or is in itself undetermined by reason of divergent views among the Karaites themselves.

The mention by the Karaites Kirkisani and Ḥassan b. Mashiaḥ of a work (or works) composed by Zadok the founder of the Sadducean party, is considered by many scholars<sup>70</sup> proof of some relation existing between Sadduceeism and Karaism.

Schechter has established close relation of "Fragments of a Zadokite work" discovered and published by him (Jewish Sectaries, Cambridge 1910, vol. I.) with the

This examination of the relation of the Karaite halakah to the Sadducean views known to us discloses how unfounded are the assertions of Weiss (Dor, IV, 85); Neubauer (Aus der Petersburger Bibliothek, 2); Fürst (Geschichte d. Karāerthums, I, 13 ff.); Harkavy (Grätz, Geschichte V<sup>4</sup>, 477 and elsewhere); Poznański (REJ., XLIV (1902), 173) and others who follow Geiger, that the Karaites agree with the Sadducees in the differences between the latter and the Pharisees.

Karaites. As Schechter himself says: "The term Zakokites naturally suggests the Sadducees; but the present state of knowledge of the latter's doctrines and practices does not offer enough points of resemblance to justify the identification of them with our sect" (Intr., XXI). However, if these fragments do contain Sadducean traditions and practices, they afford no support of the Sadducean-Karaite theory, but rather disclose further proof that in seeking for the origin of Karaism and its halakah we must cut adrift from any theory that would link it with Sadduceeism.

One of the two main and specific accusations of this Sect against their antagonists is polygamy (p. 4, 1l. 20 ff.) which nearly all Karaites allow if it does not interfere with the husband's duties to his first wife and is not "See

The suggestion of Bacher (ZfhB., 1911, 19) that these Zadokites represent a group of Sadducean priests who, not long before the destruction of the Temple, in consequence of the victory of the Pharisees, left Palestine, is based on the theory of Büchler-Chwolson that not until a decade before the national catastrophe did the Pharisees control the national life of the people-a theory which is still to be proved; comp. A. Epstein, MGWJ., XL (1896), 139-140. Kohler (l. c., 431) states that "The Fragments of a Zadokite Work" discovered by Schechter "strongly confirms the theory of Abraham Geiger as to the relationship of Samaritanism and Karaism to Sadduceeism" and that "Professor Schechter has made it highly probable, if not certain, that the Document brought to light by him formed the very source of Anan's system, which, as Kirkisani relates, was founded upon the books of Zadok" and: "We thus possess in this Document the connecting link between the ancient Sadducean and Samaritan lore and the doctrines of the Karaites in a far more direct form than Geiger and Harkavy could expect" (l. c., 432-3). The following examination of the halakah contained in this Document will show how erroneous these assertions are.

Schechter (pp. XVII, XIX, XXXVI, n. 3) believes that this Sect prohibited divorce and regarded a second marriage during the life-time of the first husband or wife, even after divorce, as fornication (comp. JQR., 1911, 138). This view is as foreign to the Karaite halakah as to Tradition; see above. This Sect decries also the Pharisaic regulation of the calendar. If the calendar of this Sect was a solar one (comp. Schechter, XVI, XX and Kohler, l. c., 429), the Karaites differ in this important point from this Sect as much as the Rabbanites.

Schechter (pp. XVIII, XLIX, notes 16, 24, LX) pointed out several agreements between the Karaite halakah and that of this Sect in the details of sabbath-observance. Extreme sabbatarianism is, however, a general sectarian propensity. Moreover, the Karaites differ from this Sect in the following laws of the sabbath.

According to this Sect (p. 11, ll. 16-17) "if any person falls into a gathering of water or unto a place of .... he shall not bring him up by a ladder or a cord or any instruthe blood of fish. This is also the view of Daniel al-Kumşi (Kirkisani, ed. Harkavy, 316). So also Hadassi, Alph. 234, end and Aaron b. Elias (און עד), 93c; החר תורה, Lev. 19a). Comp. Bacher, MGWJ., 1874, 272. Many Karaites, however, oppose this view. See Mibhar, Lev. 12a, and אסיר, lett. 65; Samuel al Magrabi, l. c., 16. Kohler's contention (l. c., 427) that the Book of Jubilees agrees on this point with Tradition against this Sect is not proved; see Book of Jubilees, 6, 10; 7, 28.

Many Karaite authorities agree with the law of this Sect (p. 12, ll. 14-15) that locusts are to be killed in water. See Hadassi, Alph. 235 (89d); Jacob b. Reuben (ZfthB., IV, 73); Samuel al-Magrabi, l. c., 9, 21; ארח אליהו (לי תו הווי לי תו tions from Tradition in the laws of the sabbath, namely, the prohibition to have fire in the house on the sabbath and the prohibition of cohabitation on the sabbath-day, which Geiger (Nachgel. Schriften, III, 288 ff.) and Harkavy (Grätz, Geschichte, V<sup>4</sup>, 478) believe, go back to Sadducean Tradition, are not shared by this Sect.

The law of this Sect that water in a rock not sufficient for immersion is contaminated, like water in a vessel, when touched by an unclean person (p. 10, ll. 13-14) is against the Karaite principle that water does not contract uncleanness. See Kirkisani (quoted by Harkavy, Grätz, Geschichte, V<sup>4</sup>, 488) who states that this was the view of Anan. So also Hadassi, Alph. 235, 286, 295; Mibhar, Lev. 28d; אדרת אליהו , 98d and 105c; כתר תורה , Lev. 28a; אדרת אליהו , 98d and 105c; כתר תורה , 10, 28a; אדרת אליהו , 98d and 105c;

76 See also Fürst, Geschichte d. Karäerthums, I, 11. While the opinion that the Sadducees also prohibited cohabitation on sabbath may be justified on the hypothesis of Geiger that any divergence from traditional halakah which is common to the early Samaritans and the Karaites goes back to a pre-Pharisaic (Sadducean) tradition, since we find the early Samaritans holding this view (Frankel, Einfluss, 253, stands alone in his opinion that this prohibition was adopted by the Samaritans from the Karaites; comp. Wreschner, 18-19), there is no reason to assume that already the early Samaritans prohibited having light in the house on sabbath. The arguments adduced by the Samaritans Manugga (Wreschner, 16, 17) and Ibrahim b. Ja'kūb (who knew the Karaite view; comp. Geiger, N. S., III 289) for this prohibition which are borrowed from the Karaites (Wreschner, 18) tend to show that this prohibition was accepted by the later Samaritans from the Karaites. Nor is it probable that this prohibition resulted from the ancient interpretation of the concept מלאכה (Geiger, l. c.; comp. Poznański, REJ., XLIV 174 ff. in connection with which see the claim of the tenth century Karaite Ibn Saquie, who, like Geiger, believed in the existence of a more ancient Halakah (JQR., XIII, 664; הקרם, I, 1908, 125), as to the reading in Tosefta Shabbat 1, 23; מים לגינה ; comp. JQR., l. c., 662; הקרם, l. c., 120).

יז See, however, the view of Joseph b. Abraham (quoted in Mibhar, l. c.) that מום תלושון contract uncleanness. The view of this Sect agrees

According to this Sect (p. 10, ll. 11-12) no man ritually unclean shall cleanse himself in the water of a vessel. As Schechter (XLVIII, n. 3) remarks, this law is directed against מים שאובים. The Karaites, however, not only allow מים שאובים (comp. MGWI., 1909, 469) but, as Kirkisani informs us (quoted by Harkavy, l. c.), it was the view of Anan that one who does not bathe in a vessel remains unclean."

The two laws contained in p. 12, ll. 15-19 are, as Schechter (p. LI, n. 27) remarks, against the Traditional view that only בלי and בלי are capable of contracting and communicating Levitical uncleanness." The Karaites agree with Tradition against this Sect. ## THE INFLUENCE OF THE WORKS OF PHILO UPON THE KARAITE HALAKAH

PENAL LAWS

1. In the laws of homicide the Karaites widely deviate from Tradition. According to Tradition, murder is punishable only when felonious intent to kill has been proved (Sanhedrin 78b ff.).* Beside intent, antecedent warning · immediately before the commission of the crime and its acknowledgment by the offender (התראה) are required (Mekilta on Ex. 21, 12; Sifre on Num. 15, 33 and Deut. 22, 24; Sanhedrin 80b; Makkot 6b and parallels). The Karaites do not require forewarning in any crime" and consider murder punishable even in the absence of intent. See משאת בנימין, 2a: המכה יומת מן אותה המכה המכה ומת מכה איש ומת ומתכוין להרגו שנא' מכה איש ומת. So also Samuel al-Magrabi (Gitelsohn, 22). Intent to kill is required by the Karaites only when the missile by which the killing has been effected was not likely to cause death. See עדן, 176d: והרוצחים חלקם הכתוב לשלש מעלות יש רוצח שרצח את הנפש .... אך הכתוב הפליג בענין זה הרוצח שאם כון להכותו לבד והכהו בדבר אשר לא יתכן למות בו והוא מת זה יקרא רוצח בשנגה · אך אם הכהו בדבר שימות בו ומת זה נמנה בחזקת רוצח מזיר שטעם מזיר שלא בדק אם

מכן אמרו אינו חייב עד שיתרה בו וכן כל חייבי לאוין : אווים עד שיתרה מן לאו שבתורה (עד שיתרה מן לאו שבתורה so also the opinion of Philo; see Werke Philos, II (Breslau 1910), 263, п. 2.

ימות בו או לא ימות (Comp. also Mibhar, Exod. 32b and כתר תורה, Numb. 49b and Samuel al Magrabi (Gitelsohn, 14) in which case the offender would, according to Tradition, not be punishable at all (Mekilta to Ex. 21, 18; Sifre to Num. 35, 17 (ed. Friedmann 61b); Sanhedrin 79a; Maimonides, רוצח, 3, 1-3.). Tradition punishes murder only when the murderer has laid his hand on the victim and the death has resulted from such direct assault; handing another poison, unless actually forcing it in his mouth, or leading him to a place where in a short while a force of nature or a beast will kill him, is thus not punished by death (Sifre to Num. 35, 17; Sanhedrin 76b ff.; Maim., רוצח, 2, 2 ff.). The Karaites do not require the death to be the direct result of the action of the murderer. The Karaites accept the view of R. Judah b. These Karaite laws approach the view of Philo according to whom intent to kill even when not carried out is punished by death (I, 314, Mangey, comp. B. Ritter, Philo und die Halacha, Leipzig 1879, 23 ff. and Werke Philos, II, 209, note 3).**

2. Ransom for death caused by the unguarded property of a man or through his instrumentality is required, according to Tradition, only in the case of the goring ox (Exod. 21, 29-31), the provision not applying to death caused by any other property or by any cause of danger created by him (Baba kamma 5, 6; b. ib., 53b; Maimonides, נוקי ממח, 12, 16). The Karaites interpret the law of ransom (v. 30) to apply to all cases where a person meets death through the negligence of the owner of the property or the creator of the cause of death. Thus, whether it be a pit (Ex. 21, 33-35), or a fire kindled on one's premises that spread beyond (ib., 22, 5), or failure of the owner of a house to build a battlement for his roof (Deut. 22, 8) and a person was killed as a result of such negligencein all these cases the Karaites hold that the owner of the property or the maker of the fire or pit is to pay ransom, according to Exod. 21, 30. As Hadassi says: חורת השונג ששנג ולא שמר שורו : אשר הועד ולא כסה לבורו ואשר לא עשה מעקה לנגו ותולד מהם מיתה יחד יכשר לתת כפר כתורתך (Alph., 274). See ib., Alph. 270 and 370. A view similar to this Karaite anti-traditional law—that also other cases of criminal negligence are punishable—is held by Philo.

Expounding the law of Ex. 21, 33 (II, 324), Philo says that if a man fall into the pit and die the court shall decide what punishment the digger is to suffer or what fine he is to pay (στι χρη παθειν η αποτισαι). He also says about the law of Deut. 22, 8, that those who fail to make a battlement to their roof commit a crime equal to that of one who digs a pit, and declares: κολαζεσθωσαν γουν εν ισω τοις αχανη τα στομια των ορυγματων καταλειπουσιν; comp. Ritter, 52 and notes.

Philo and the Karaites agree also in the interpretation of v. 29b וגם בעליו יומת. Tradition interprets it to mean that the owner, if he does not redeem himself, shall suffer death at the hand of God® מיתה בידי שמים (Mekilta, Mishpatim, X; ** Frankel (Einfluss., 93) believes that the translation of the Septuagint indicates the traditional interpretation, against which see Ritter, 48, n. 2 and 124 ff. and H. The view of Geiger (Urschrift, 448 ff.) that the ancient halakah interpreted מיחה בידי אדם 23 וגם בעליו יומת was already shown by Pineles (דרכה של תורה) 193-6) and Weyl (l. c., 144-153) to be unfounded; comp. also Poznański, Abraham Geiger, Leben u. The Karaites uphold the literal interpretation of וגם בעליו (i. e. בידי אדם (i. e. מידי אדם (i. e. מואלי (i. e. אדם בשר יושת עליו) and take (v. 30a) to mean that the nearest kinsmen (גואלי הדם) of the killed are to decide whether to execute him or to take ransom. See Benjamin Nahawendi, ואם הוא נודע [השור] ובעליו מועד וממית אדם הוא בנימין והשור ובעליו ומתר ובעליו יומת אדם הוא נואלי יומת וומתר וומה בעליו יומת אדם הוא נואלי הדם רוצים ליקח ממנו כפר יון וינצל בעבור כי הריגה זו על ידי הבהמה לפיכך הרשות בידם אם רוצים הורנים ואם רוצים לוקחים כפר: שבה"א See also Hadassi (Alph. 270, 370); גן עדן 177d, and המל (Gitelsohn, 35-36).

Philo holds the same view, and in his exposition of this law (II, 323) says that the owner of the goring ox is guilty of the man's death. He shall be put to death or pay ransom. The court shall decide his punishment. The Karaites thus agree with Philo and differ only as to the question with whom rests the option of death or ransom; while according to Philo (so also Mekilta, ad loc.) the court is to decide, the Karaites hold that it rests with the

3. Tradition interprets the law of Ex. 21, 24-26 and Lev. 24, 19-21 to mean money indemnity (Mekilta ad loc., (Miṣhpaṭim 8); Sifra on Emor, 24, 19; Baba kamma 8, 1; Ketubbot 35a and parallels; comp. Maimonides, חובל ומויק 1, 1 ff.).

Philo takes these verses literally and in several places vigorously advocates the practice of lex talionis. See Ritter, Philo und die Halacha, p. 18 ff. The lex talionis is accepted in all its severity also by nearly all the Karaites. Benjamin Nahawendi interprets עין תחת עין literally. See also Rapoport, בכורי העחים, 1831, p. 34. L. Löw, Gesammelte Schriften, I, 287 is to be corrected accordingly. Harkavy, ט"הם לענן, 198. believes that Anan also upheld lex talionis; comp. also Schechter, Jewish Sectaries, II, 7, 11. 5-7. The Samaritans also interpret עין תחת עין literally (Klumel, Mischpatim, ein samaritanisch-arabischer Commentar, XX; JQR., 1911, 210 is to be corrected accordingly). Some Karaites restrict the application of lex talionis to intentional permanent injury; still others leave it to the discretion of the court to pronounce sentence of equal punishment or indemnity; comp. Mibhar, Exod. 53a; כתר תורה, Exod. 71b ff. According to the Scholion of Megillat Ta'anit ch. 4 (Neubauer, Mediaeval Jewish Chronicles, II, 8; comp. Grätz, III4, 693) the Boethusians extended their literalism to lex talionis. Geiger at one time (Urschrift, 148, but see id., Sadducaer u. Pharisaer, 22; Nachg. Schriften, V, Heb., 162), Rapoport (וברי שלום ואמת, 15), and Ritter (133-4) deny this report any historical basis (comp. Jost, Geschichte d. Judenthums, I, Leipzig 1885, 221; L. Löw, l. c., 286; Büchler, MGWJ., L. (1906), 679, n. and the literature adduced by Ritter, 1. c.). Such an important difference would not have been left unnoticed in the talmudic literature. It is also improbable that Josephus, who was an avowed Pharisee (Vita, II, end) and who in all the differences between the Sadduccees and the Pharisees, as far as his opinion is known to us, sides with the Pharisees (except in the interpretation of אשר משרף in Lev. 21, 9; see Olitzki, Flavius Josephus und die Halacha, Berlin 1885, 42, 44, 54 and Ritter, 26), would have accepted the literal interpretation of עין תחת עין (Ant. IV, 8, 35) if it were anti-Pharisaic.

Geiger (Nachg. Schriften, V, Heb. 162) claims that the ancient halakah also interpreted נין החח עין literally, as R. Eliezer held this view (Baba kamma 84a; see the version of R. Eliezer's opinion in Mibhar, Exod. 42a, which he seems to have taken from Mekilta, Mishpaṭim, 8, reading R. Eliezer for הורות הראשונים (comp. Geiger, l. c., and L. Löw, l. c., 287, n. 2). See I. Halevy, אורות הראשונים, vol. Ic, 425 ff. for elucidation of the traditional view and that of R. Eliezer; comp. S. Munk, Guide des Egarés, 371, n. 1. Philo (II, Philo (II, 323, end) states that the owner of an animal that killed a slave is to pay the full value of the slave. Ritter (49) considers this view of Philo to be against Exod. 21, 32: שלשים שקלים יתן לאדניו. Many Karaite authorities agree with Philo and hold that v. 32 establishes the minimum fine and that if the value of the slave be more than שלשים שקל, the owner is to be paid the full value of the slave. Other Karaites hold that by שלשים שקל the law indicates the value of the average slave and that in all cases the owner of the animal is to pay the full value of the slave. See גן עדן, 181a: לתח ואם המית עבר דן הכתוב שלשים שקלים לבעל העבד. ובעלי הקבלה אמרו שעליו יש להקל ולהחמיר אחד עבד שכפחותים ואחד עבד שבחשובים ערך אחד גרולים וקטנים עבר ושפחה אע"פ שיש מחכמי הקראים חולקים בזה: יש כהם אומרים שזה ערך הפחות אבל יש להוסיף עליו. ומהם אומרים כתר תורה So also שיה לוך בינוני ויש להוכיף ולגרוע. Exod. 73b.

The Karaites agree with Philo also in the interprecation of Exod. 21, 19 אם יקום והתהלך בחוץ על משענתו. Tradition (Mekila ad loc. (Mishpatim, 6); Onkelos and p. Ketubbot 4, 4 (28c; but see Ps.-Jon. and Nahm. ad loc.), taking אל משענתו figuratively, interprets it to mean that the offender is not liable for death consequent on a blow, if in the interval the injured party has so far recovered that he is able to walk about "on his own strength," i. e. without others' assistance. Philo (II, 317; Ritter, 32, note 3) takes או literally, namely, that even when the injured party required the support of a staff or of a man the offender is 313; Ritter, 22) holds (against Mishnah Sanhedrin 9, 1; Mekilta on Exod. 21, 12) that the murderer is to be killed in the same manner in which he committed the crime (so also Book of Jubilees 4, 32). This is also the view of many Karaites. See S. Gitelsohn, Civil-Gesetse der Karäer von Samuel al-Magrebi, 14, 11. 13-15; see, however, 17, 12, 177c. The opinion of Büchler (MGWJ., L. The Karaites interpret also Deut. 25, 12 הקצות את כפה against Tradition (Sifre ad loc.; comp. Midrash Tannaim. ed. Hoffmann, 168 ff.) literally; see Mibhar ad loc. (22b); αποι ad loc.; Samuel Al Magrabi, (Gitelsohn, 29). So also Philo (II, 328): Εστω δε η δικη χειρος αποκοπη της αψαμενης ών οὐ θεμις.

4. Philo deviates in his exposition of Exod. 21, 22 ff. from Tradition which refers now in verses 22-23 to the woman and holds the man guilty of murder if he killed the mother, but not punishable for the deadly effect of the blow on the unborn child, regarding the foetus only as part or limb of the mother (pars viscerum matris) and without an independent existence (Mekilta ad loc.; Baba kamma 48b ff.; see also Ohalot 7, 6 and Ps.-Jon. to v. 22). Philo (II, 317 comp. 319, beg.) takes this law to refer to the embryo and interprets these verses: If the foetus miscarried by the blow was not formed at the time of the blow the offender is not liable for murder (verse 22), but if the embryo has assumed a distinct shape and is completed the offender shall die for the death of the child (verse 23)." Philo, though considering the unborn child to be a part of the mother (II, 319), holds that the law of Lev. 22, 28

Philo follows the Septuagint in the interpretation of these verses; see Ritter, 35. Josephus (Ant., IV, 8, 33) agrees with Tradition and refers אוסט to the mother only; comp. Geiger, Urschrift, 436-7. Yet he holds, like the Karaites (Hadassi, Alph. 270 (103b)), causing abortion to be murder. See C. Ap., II, 24; comp. M. Zipser, Des Flavius Josephus Werk... gegen Apion, 164. Some Karaites follow Tradition in the interpretation of אוסט האוסט האוסט includes the prohibition of sacrificing a pregnant animal, a law unknown to Tradition (II, 398; comp. Frankel, Ueber palästinische u. alexandrinische Schriftforschung, 32, n. 6; Ritter, 109 and notes). Philo (l. c.; comp. Ritter, l. c., n. 3) seems also to believe, against Tradition (Arakin 7a; comp. Ps.-Jan. to Deut. 22, 22), that the law reprieves a pregnant woman condemned to death. These antitraditional views of Philo are found also among the Karaites. The Karaites, like Philo, consider the killing of an embryo murder punishable by death (Hadassi, Alph. 2380, 2700, 275'; see also references given below) and interpret אסא in verses 22, 23 to refer to the embryo or to the mother and the embryo. See Kirkisani (ed. Poznański) in Gedenkbuch zur Erinnerung an David Kaufmann, Breslau 1900, 186; Hadassi, Alph. 238; 270; Mibhar, Exod. 42b; כתר תורה, Exod. 71b ff.; נן ערן, 177d; 179c-d; Samuel al Magrabi, ed. Gitelsohn, 27 ff. They also consider the killing of a pregnant animal violation of Lev. 22, 28 and go even further than Philo in prohibiting the a foetus found in a killed animal, for food. Samuel al Magrabi (MS. 86a) states: ואם יאמר אום היא מעוברת היכשר כי ההרג והיא מעוברת, יאמר לו לא יכשר כי ההרג והיא מעוברת אבל יאחרוה לאחר שתלד ואחר לידהה תהרג ואם לא כן נהיה הורגים של ישחרוה לאחר שתלד ואחר לידהה תהרג ואם לא כן נהיה הורגים.

5. Tradition interprets: תקב שם הי מות יומח (Lev. 24, 16) to mean the cursing of the Divine Name (Sanhedrin 7, 5; Sifra ad loc; comp. Ps-Jon. ad loc.: ברם מאן רמפרש); so also the Septuagint (comp. Frankel, Einfluss, 132) and Josephus (Ant. IV, 8, 6). Philo (Vita Mosis, II, § 206 ff.) refers this law to any disrespectful mention of the name of God at an inappropriate occasion or place. To this untraditional interpretation of בחל של חלקב by Philo, goes back the view of Philo (Tischendorf, Philonea, 79; comp. Frankel, Eidesleistung d. Juden, Dresden 1840, 21; Ritter, 45-7) that the law punishes a false oath with death. As Philo (l. c., 80) argues, a false oath involves the dishonor of the Divine Name therein employed (comp. Lev. 19, 12)

See also against this contention of Geiger Pineles, דרכה של תורה, 190 ff.; L. Löw, Ges. Schr. III, 401; Gronemann, 122, note. It must also be pointed out that most of the Karaites mentioned above do not distinguish in the interpretation of מונו between a finished and an unfinished embryo.

According to Tradition (Tosefta Makkot 4, 5; b. Shabuot 20a) the penalty of a false oath is אוֹלְים, comp., however, אוֹנה, אוֹנה, 2 מוֹנְים, 2 and Naḥm. on Lev. 27, 29. See Schechter, Jewish Sectaries, I, p. 16, l. 8 and notes, that according to the sect which Schechter designates as Zadokite (see above) "one is to keep a vow pledging him to a particular commandment even at the risk of death." The view of Kohler (American Journal of Theology, 1911, 417), that according to that sect the penalty of any false oath is death is not proved. The Zadokite sect (l. c., p. 15, ll. 1-3) agrees also with Philo (l. c.; comp. Frankel, Bidesleistung, 19-20) that oaths are not to be taken by God's name. view is not due to their fondness for exaggeration but is based on the above-mentioned Philonian interpretation of Lev. 24, 16 and Num. 15, 30 (for Num. 15, 30, see Philo, II, 252 and 404) is evident from the fact that a similar view is held by Maimonides who, in disagreement with the talmudic interpretation (Sifre, ad loc.; Horayot 8a; Keritot 7b; comp. Rashi, Rashbam, and Naḥm., ad loc.; comp. also Mibhar, Num. 15a; כתר תורה Num. 22b), refers Num. 15, 30 to all antinomian actions. See מורה נבוכים, III, 41 (Eng. translation by M. Even if an Israelite eats meat (boiled) in milk or wears garments of wool and linen, or rounds off the corners of his head, in spite against the Law, in order to show clearly that he does not believe in its truth, I apply to him the words 'he reproacheth the Lord' and (I am of the opinion) that he must suffer death as an unbeliever. .. According to my opinion, all the members of an Israelitish community which has insolently and presumptously transgressed any of the Divine precepts must be put to death."

name is used (Sanhedrin 7, 12; Mekilta ad loc.). Striking parents is punished by death (Ex. 21, 15) only when the blow is a מכה שיש בה חבורה (Sanhedrin 10, 1; Mekilta, ad loc.). Death for the latter offense is by strangulation (l. c.). Philo (Tischendorf, Philonea, 77) makes death the penalty for every manner of insult to parents, and death by stoning the penalty for striking parents (l. c. and Frag., II, 629). The Karaites agree with Philo and refer Ex. 21, 15 to any physical violence against parents; see Mibhar, ומכה אביו ואמו : בכל מיני מכה בין שיש בה חבורה : Exod., 41b כתר תורה so also, כתר תורה, Exod., 70b and Samuel al Magrabi, ed. Gitelsohn, 17. Nor do the Karaites in Exod. 21, 17 condition the use of the Divine Name. See Hadassi, Alph. 272 (103d); Mibhar, Exod. 42a; כתר , Exod. 70b, and Samuel al Magrabi, l. c., 19. They agree also with Philo in making death by stoning the penalty for violence to parents. See Hadassi, Alph. 2677 כתר תורה, Exod. 70b; comp. Samuel al (102c) and Magrabi, ed. Gitelsohn, 19, Büchler, MGWJ., L (1906), 683.

™ For the Samaritan view comp. ZDMG., XLVII (1893), 681. Mark 7, 10 ff. and Matthew 15, 5 ff. (comp. commentaries) perhaps refer to this older interpretation of Exod. 21, 17: that every manner of insult to parents is punished by death. Comp. Wünsche, Neue Beitiäge, 181-6.

The Karaites decry what they falsely ascribe to the Rabbanites: the opinion that punishment is inflicted only when the curse or blow affected both parents; Hadassi, Alph., 249, says: הורו כך במכה אביו ואמו מות יומת 249, says: אינו חייב אלא עד שיכה את שניהם בכת אחת ובן בקללה עד שיקלים בכת אחת so also Alph. 250<sup>D</sup>; see also Salmon b. no such distinction." This view, however, is found among the Karaites. Jepheth b. Ali (quoted in Mibhar, Exod. 42b) punishes cursing אלד or שיש with death. Hadassi (Alph. 343°) states that cursing a righteous Judge is a capital crime; so also Samuel al Magrabi (ed. Gitelsohn, 21) who also states (MS., 147b) that even the cursing of the patriarch of a tribe or family is punished by death.

MARRIAGE LAWS

- 7. The issue of a prohibited alliance is a bastard (ממור) and the law enjoins concerning him: לא יבא ממור בקהל (Deut. 23, 3). Tradition (Yebamot 8, 3) refers it to marriage. Philo, as was pointed out by Ritter (91, n. 5).
- "Weiss, Dor, I, 126, note, relying on Kiddushin 66a: הדיום שבישראל, believes this to have been the Sadducean ciew (the חוף מלקות there was not, as Weiss l. c., states, in accordance with Deut. 12, 18, but because Judah (or Eleazar; see Josephus, Ant. For the Septuagint see Frankel, Einfluss, 204, and for Philo see Ritter, 91, n. 5. Most of the later Karaites agree with the accepted talmudic interpretation of ממור (Sifre, II, 248; Yebamot 4, 13; Kiddushin 3, 12; see p. Kiddushin 3, 2; Tosafot Yebamot 49a, s. v. איסורי ביאה, 15, 1; Frankel, Grundlinien d. mosaisch-talmudischen Eherechts, 5, n. 21 is to be corrected accordingly); see Mibhar, Deut. 19b; so also איסורי ביאה, 149c: ואיזה הוא ממור הנולד מאיסורי 149c; אוסורי ביאה (105d) and Samuel al-Magrabi, ed. Gitelsohn, 11, 1. 14. For a peculiar interpretation of the concept by some early Karaites as referring to the Chazars see Harkavy, Semitic Studies in memory of Dr. Kohut, Berlin 1897, 246-7. interprets this verse, verses 2, 4 (II, 261), and v. 9 (II 393) to mean that the agin is not to mingle with the community of Israel and does not refer to marriage. In his exposition of v. 9, (II, 393) he says: "... καλειν εις εκκλησιαν και μεταδιδοναι θειων λογων, ους θεμις τους αυτοχθονας και ευπατριδας ιεροφαντεισθαι." This view, as Samuel al Magrabi informs us, was held by many Karaites (MS., 91b) אודע כי אשר רברנוהו (MS., 91b) הוא על דעת רוב החכמים  $1^{nt}$  (וגם התיר קצתם זאת הבעילה על תנאי בי יהיה זרעם פחות והוא כי ששן נתן בתו לירחע עבדו והיה מצרי ... וברעתם כל הנאמר בו לא יבוא לא ירצה בו הבעילה אבל רצונו בזה בעתות הקרבנות והשמחות בחופות חתנים ומילות ובקהלות האומה והביא באר ממאמרו אשר ציויתי לא יבואו בקהל לך אחר אמרו כי ראתה נוים ... באו מקרשה

This is the view of many early Karaites. See Hadassi, Alph. 365 (140b): ידוק המשפט של ילד הנולד מן ערות ווא מוס לדרך אסור בזמן זו גלות נדודי להוציא ומן אשת איש ומן נויה ומכל דרך אסור בזמן זו גלות נדודי: להוציא הילודים ואמותם מיחס זרע הקדש .... ואם יש חפץ לאחד מישראל להתחתן עמהם יכתב בכתובתם כעורם וקלקול ייחוסם לדורות להחרידי כאשר .... so also Alph. 373 (148d). Aaron b. Joseph (Mibhar, Deut. 19b) states that Sahl b. Maṣliaḥ (second half of the tenth century) held that marriage with a ממור ממור ממור ממור בקהל המורן. Sahl b. Maṣliaḥ, evidently, also interpreted הממור אור בא ממור בקהל אור בא ממור בקהל, as did Philo, Hadassi, and the Karaites mentioned by Samuel al Magrabi, to mean that the ממור ממור מור בכל דבר בכל דבר : בכל דבר : בכל דבר : הנכון בנשואין לבד לא יבא בקהל הי :בכל דבר : הנכון בנשואין לבד ( המור בסף : הנכון בנשואין לבד ; המור בסף : הנכון בנשואין לבד ; המור בסף : מירת בסף : הנכון בנשואין לבד , ad loc.

<sup>100</sup> The interpretation given by Geiger (אוצר נחמר, IV, 21-2) to this view of Sahl is forced and unnecessary. Geiger's reference (l. c., 22) to Sahl's opinion quoted in Mibhar, Deut. 6b, has no bearing on his view

8. In the exposition of the law of Deut. 21, 10-15 concerning marriage with a female captive of war, Tradition makes no distinction between a married woman and the unmarried (Sifre, ad loc.; Kiddushin 21b: אשת — ואשת השלו). So also Josephus, Ant. IV, 8, 23. The Karaites hold that this law refers only to the case when the captive

The Karaite anti-traditional view (see Kiddushin 3, 13; Yebamot II, 5 and parallels) that children born to a Jew from a Gentile woman are considered to be Jews which caused the early Karaites to interpret להוציא in Ezra 10, 3 as referring to the mothers only (Pinsker. See also the early Bible critic (ed. by Schechter), JQR., XIII, 362, lines 22-25, and note on p. 371.

The assertion of M. Friedmann (Beth Talmud, I, 106) that the Karaites like Tradition (Yebamot 8, 4, b. ib., 76b ff. and parallels), interpret Deut. 23, 4: עמוני ולא עמונית is erroneous. All Karaites attack this traditional view. See Elias b. Abraham (Pinsker, II, 105); Mibhar and מתר תורה אורח צריקים, 93c; אורח ארוח צריקים, 146b; 149d ff.; אורח צריקים, Goslow 1835), 51a; comp., however, Hadassi, Alph. 323 (119b). The legitimacy of David (descendant of Ruth the Moabitess) they save by asserting that Deut. 23, 4 refers only to those who do not embrace Judaism.

Schorr (אחלוץ), 1V, 43) claims that Maimonides is inconsistent in considering (איסורי ביאה, 12, 18; not 12, 9) the law of עמוני ולא עמונית as this law is disputed, and quotes Yebamot 8, 4; ואם לדון אם לדון השובה and Tosafot, ib., 77b, s. ש השובה. Schorr apparently overlooked the fact that איס מוני and Tosafot by him quoted refer to the question of עמוני ולא עמונית and have nothing to do with the law of איס מוני ולא עמונית.

So also אדרת אליהו , 92b: ולכן אמרו חכמינו בשבויה שהיא אלמנה .... לא לפי דעת בעלי הקבלה ולכן אמרו חכמינו בשבויה שהיא אלמנה .... לא לפי דעת בעלי הקבלה so also Abraham b. Josiah Jerushalmi in his אמונה אמן (Goslow 1846), 24a. Samuel al Magrabi (MS. 222a-b) states: דע כי זה מאמרו בעשרת הדברים לא תנאף ינוש: אסור כל אשה בעלת איש אם הוא מאנשי הדת או מוולתם מהאומות.... ומי יתלה את עניניו ונפשו באשת יפת תאר ובספור הכתוב עליה ואמר אולי יהי אישה עודנו בחיים יאמר לו זאת התליה אין בה טענה חוקה כי אנשי זו העיר אולי נהרנו .... ונם כי בודאי יהי חקירה על זה הענין קודם התחברו עם האשה הנזכרה למען יעשה כפי חפץ הכתוב That this is also the view of Philo was shown by Ritter, 75.

9. The penalty of adultery with a married woman is according to Tradition (Sanhedrin 10, 1; Sifra קרושים, 9 (ed. Weiss, 92a) strangulation. Many Karaites, however, hold that the law of Deut. 22, 24 applies not only to the betrothed, but also to a married woman; the punishment being stoning in both cases. So Samuel al-Magrabi speaking of adultery and its punishment says (MS., 6a): ואם יאמר אומר איד הרינתם יאמר לו הרינתם באבנים כי ידענו זה ממאמרו על המאורשה והוצאתם את שניהם אל שער העיר ההוא וסקלתם אותם באבנים ומתו כי לא הפריש בין הבעולה והמאורשה במשפט כי המאורשה נקראת אשת איש; see also L. That this is also the view of Philo is evident from the fact that he sets death by stoning even for the unmarried harlot; see II, 308, where he says: παλιν πορνην κατα τον ιερον λογον οὐ παραδεχεται η πολιτεια ... Ως λυμη ουν και ζημια και κοινον μιασμα καταλυεσθω. 102

ימו See Ritter's comment on this law of Philo (p. 92); but see Book of Jubilees 20, 4 which also seems to punish unchastity of an unmarried woman with death (by burning, in accordance with Gen. 38, 24). The early Karaites also considered unchastity of a מומל לא חנאף: see Salmon b. Jeroham quoted by Pinsker, II, 62: אווים באשר עמיתן ווה (בדרך הריבונין comp. also the opinion of Saul b. Anan quoted there (the authenticity of the אווים, VI, 88a). See also the Samaritan reading of Deut. 23, 18: אווים, VI, 88a). See also the Samaritan reading of Deut. 23, 18: אווים, VI, 39, n. 104. It is, however, possible that the Karaites, in fixing stoning as the penalty for adultery, were influenced, as in many other instances (Steinschneider, Beschneidung d. Araber u. Mohammedaner, 26-7; id., Polemische Literatur d. Juden, 398, n. 1; Wreschner, 41, 44), by the Mohammedan law which also punishes adultery with stoning; comp. ZDMG., LIII (1899), 161.

102 Noteworthy in this connection is the agreement between the view held by the earliest Karaite authorities (Anan and Benjamin Nahawendi) and the practice in vogue among the Alexandrian Jews in the first century B. C. I refer to Tosefta Ketubbot 4, 9; Baba meşi'a 104a; p. Ketubbot בשחיו בני אלכסנדריא מקדשין נשים אחר (אחר or) בא וחומפה מן השוק 8: which seems to indicate that the אלכסנדריא considered betrothal not so binding as נשואין (A. Brüll, Fremdsprachliche Redensarten in den Talmuden u. Midraschim, Leipzig 1869, 32, note, wrongly translates this passage: "Wenn die Alexandriner sich Frauen angelobten, nahmen sie sie gerade von der Strasse weg."). Büchler (Festschrift zu Israel Lewy's siebzigstem Geburtstag, Breslau 1911, 123, n. 3) justly remarks: "Vielleicht war hierin hellenistischer Einfluss wirksam" (Büchler, I. c., thinks that the words (or לביתי לחופה לכשתכנסי לחופה שמר were inserted in the to make the ארוסין unbinding. But, then, what was the purpose of the and of the ארוסין?). Philo also states (II, ארוסין that there are many who do not consider unchastity with a betrothed woman to be adultery, though he himself agrees with Tradition (comp. Frankel, Grundlinien d. mos.-tal. Eherechts, XXIV ff.) that bethrothal is as binding as marriage (ib., and II, 229). See also p. Hagigah 2, 2: היו בני ירושלים כותבין : מירושלים הגדולה לאלכסנדריא הקמנה : עד מתי ארוסי יושב אצלכם where ארוםי (p. Sanhedrin 6, 6 reads: געלי, but see Halevy, דורות הראשונים, וב, 478, note) is perhaps an allusion to the view of the בני אלכםנדריא

10. Philo (II, 310) states that violation of a widow or divorced woman is a crime approaching adultery and the court shall decide upon the punishment whether it be physical chastisement or pecuniary fine. Tradition, as Ritter (90-91) observes, makes no distinction between a divorced woman or widow and a woman who has never been married. A view similar to that of Philo is held by the Karaites, some of them even making carnal intercourse with a widow or divorced woman a captal crime while most concerning ארוסין as not being binding. This view of the Alexandrian Jews was held also by the earliest Karaites who maintained that the betrothed can sever their connections without a writ of divorce and that, in general, betrothal does not have the force of marriage. See Anan (מ"ח, ed. Harkavy, 118) פא אמא : כי יקח איש אשה ובעלה אלמא אי לא בעלה לא צריך (אור בי יקח איש אשה ובעלה לא משטרה; so also Benjamin Nahawendi, משארות מאורשות דין בערים שלא פרש בהן בגם המקרא שנ' כי יקח (בנימין 56: הנימין so also Hadassi, Alph. 365 (141a); comp. also 154c.

Geiger, relying on the view of Beth Shammai: אין ממאנין אלא ארוסות (Yebamot 13, 1), claims that the older halakah distinguished in a similar manner between און (Jüd. Zeitschr., II, 97; Nachg. Schr., V. IIeb., 162). As the marriage of a minor by her mother or brothers is only a Rabbinic institution, the view of Beth Shammai concerning מיאון does not prove much. Hadassi, Alph. 250 (96b) and 334-5 (123ab) falsely states that according to the Rabbanites a minor given to marriage by her father (Deut. 22, 16) is free to annul her marriage through אי זהו מיאון ... אי אמשי בקירושין שקרשוני אבי מאמר האישות (Holdheim, מאמר האישות (Holdheim, האישות (Holdheim, האישות (Holdheim, האישות אליהו פולה), 53, note, erroneously ascribes this view to Elias Bashyazi; see to the contrary, his אליהו מואר (Pro another misrepresentation of a traditional law by Hadassi see above, note 96; see also Bacher, MGWI., XL (1896), 21, n. 5.

108 Büchler's suggestion (MGWI., L. (1906), 674, note) that this law of Philo goes back to the more ancient view (represented by Beth Shammai) allowing divorce only in case of the wife's adultery and considering the divorced woman to be still to some extent an אשת אווי is not plausible as it does not account for Philo's view concerning אלמנה Moreover, Philo and the Karaites do not share the view of Beth Shammai and allow divorce for any cause. See, for Philo, Ritter, 70, note 1 and, for the Karaites, above.

דוו. Tradition (Sotah I, I; Sifre on Num. 5, I3) makes warning by husband and subsequent סחידה of wife with the man against whom she has been warned condition precedent to subjection of the woman to ordeal of Num., 5, I5 ff. Philo, speaking of this law (II, 308), says that in case the husband suspects his wife of adultery they are to bring the matter before the court in the Holy City (comp. Sotah I, 4) and if the court is undecided the woman is to submit to the ordeal; Philo, evidently, not considering necessary suspicion of a particular man, warning (קנוי) and חורה. This is also the view of the Karaites. See Hadassi, Alph. 328, end and 239; Mibhar, Num. 5a: מחרה, Num. 7a; so also 1, 157b:

<sup>104</sup> One of these must be before witnesses (Sotah 1, 1). The accepted norm (Maim., המוס, 1, 1-2) requires witnesses for both.

<sup>106</sup> Ritter (pp. 81-85) discusses this law as given by Philo; he fails, however, to notice this essential deviation of Philo from Tradition.

הקבלה שאמרו שנסתרה כשיעור ביאה ואומרים שצריכה עדי קנוי ועדי ... הקבלה שאמרו שנסתרה כשיעור ביאה ואומרים להשקות ...

12. Tradition takes Deut. 22, 20: אם אמת היה הדבר to mean that in case adultery during betrothal has been established by the testimony of witnesses, penalty is death (v. 21) in accordance with Deut. 22, 24 (Sifre, ad loc.; Ketubbot 46a: comp. Frankel, Der gerichtliche Beweis, 49). Philo, in his exposition of this law (II, 313), says that if the husband's charge be found true, the parents of the woman are guilty of having deceived the husband at the time of the betrothal. Philo, evidently, held that the accusation of the husband, whose substantiation involves death, was unchastity before betrothal.107 This is also the view of most of the Karaites. See Hadassi, Alph. 366 (141b-c) that the mere absence of the בתולים is sufficient to convict her: מענתו עוד אם "חייבים אב ואם שלה להכין על היצוע שמלה .... "מענתו עוד אם" לא יכינו האם והאב או הנמצאים בעת ההיא את השמלה על המטה וחוא צועק ומגיד בבעילה ראשונה כי לא מצאתי בתולים לנערה ..... כיון שמבקשים את השמלה ולא היא נמצאת בסקילה חייבת היא הנערה: מעמו שאמר: לא נמצאן בתולים לנערה: והוציאו את הנערה: see also Alph. 365 (140c): דרוש ידרשו הדיינים ואם יש שמלה שמלה ופרשו "דרוש ידרשו הדיינים ואם השמלה ונו' והאמת ינידו ... ואם אמת היה הדבר לא נמצאו לה בתולים אם מוכת עץ היא או מכל מכה או מחולי ועדים על זה יעידו ... ואם איז

יס In case the suspected woman refuses to submit to this ordeal she is, according to Tradition (Sotah 1, 3), to be divorced and forfeits her dowry. 108 Related to this Philonian-Karaite interpretation of Deut. 22, 20 is the Karaite interpretation of Lev. 21, 9. Tradition refers this law to a betrothed or married daughter of a priest (Sifra, ad loc.; Sanhedrin 50b ff.; Ps.-Jon., ad loc.). The Karaites maintain that this law-שוכם for unchastity in a priest's daughter-refers also to the unmarried. See Hadassi, Alph. 330 (121d); Mibhar, Lev. 38b: הכתוב מרבר ...; so ...; so also כתר תורה, Lev. 58b. Samuel al-Magrabi (L. Cohn, Des Samuel al-Magrebi Abhandlung über die Pflichten d. Priester u. Richter, 9) even asserts that this law applies also to מוֹ guilty of unchaste conduct with a woman married or unmarried; comp. also Mibhar, Gen. 60a and מירת כסף ad loc. and to Mibhar, Lev. 34a, letter 232. This is also the view of Philo (? Hoffmann, Leviticus, II, 90) and Josephus (Ant., IV, 8, 23; comp. Ritter, 81; P. Grunbaum, Die Priestergesetze bei Flavius Josephus, Halle 1887, 18, n. 2; Weyl, 106). Comp. also B. Beer, Das Buch d. Jubiläen u. sein Verhältniss zu den Midraschim, Leipzig 1856, 58. The view of Büchler (MGWJ., L (1896), 681, n. 2) that this was also the view of R. Eliezer (Sanhedrin 51a) is very improbable; comp. also Weiss, Dor, I, 151.

For the mode employed in the execution of בת כהן: Lev. 21, 20) which, according to Rab Joseph (Sanhedrin 52b), was taken by the Sadducees (so also Josephus, Ant., IV, 8, 23) literally (comp. Brüll, בית, IV, 7 ff.; Weiss, Dor, I, 151; Büchler, l. c., 549 ff., 557 ff.) the Karaites disagree among themselves; see Samuel al-Magrabi, l. c.; comp. also Hadassi, Alph. 324 P.

13. Num. 36, 6-10 provides that when a man dies without male issue and his daughter inherits his property, the heiress is to marry only within her tribe so that the allotment of one tribe might not pass over to another. According to talmudic interpretation (Baba batra 120a ff.; comp. Pseudo-Jonathan on verse 6: לא להן לכנת צלפחר דא פתנמא דפקיר ה' לא ארץ אלהן לכנת צלפחר and Geiger, Urschrift, 447) this rule applied only to the "generation of the conquest," while according to Samuel (B. b. 120a) even in the case of the daughters of Zelophehad it was not a command, but merely counsel: עצה מובה השיאם הכתוב (but comp. Ritter, 97, n. 1, and Ibn Ezra, ad loc., v. 8).

Philo<sup>110</sup> states that in case a daughter inherits she is to marry one of her relatives (based perhaps on Num. 36. 11), in the absence of which she must at least not marry out of her tribe, thus applying the law of Num. 36, 6-10 to all generations.

100 According to the scholion of Megillat Taanit (ch. 4) the Boethusians interpreted ומרשו וופרשו (ממש). Rapoport (ממש), 14); (4); Geiger (Urschrift, 148) and Ritter (133 ff.; comp. Büchler, l. c., 680, note; comp. Weiss, Dor., I, 117) consider this report unauthentic as this view is held also by R. Eliezer b. Jacob (Sifre, II, 237; Ketubbot 46a); see, however, Halevy, הראשונים 15, 415-18.

no See Treitel, MGWJ., XLVII (1903), 409. Philo explains also the law of yibbum (Deut. 25, 5-11) as a means that the allotment of one might not pass over to another (II, 443; Ritter, 69, n. 3 errs in asserting that Philo mentions nowhere the law of DID) which is also the prevailing view among the later Karaites (comp. Poznański, REJ., XLV (1902), 62). Josephus also considers the law of Num. 36, 7 as applying to all times (Ant., IV, 7, 5; comp. Ritter, 96-7). This view is shared also by the author of Tobit 6, 12-13; comp. M. Rosemann, Studien zum Buche Tobit, Berlin 1894, 3 ff. and F. Rosenthal, Vier apokryphische Bücher, Leipzig 1885, 116, note.

The talmudic interpretation finds in the words כי אם support for the tradition that a priest is to defile himself by approaching the body of his wife<sup>iii</sup> (Sifra, ad loc.: אין שארו אלא אשתו שנ' שאר אביך הוא; Yebamot 22b). The Karaites, rejecting this interpretation of שארו, ייי forbid the 118 See Ritter, 73, n. 2 and Hoffmann, Magazin, VIII (1881), 56. It is, however, possible that Philo recorded here a custom which he believed to be a law. Büchler (Die Priester u. d. Cultus, 88-9; comp. also Berakot 44a; Pesahim 49a; Rashi, Yebamot 84b, s. v. ND) has collected instances which tend to show that also ordinary priests married only daughters of priests (comp. also Grätz, MGWI., 1879, 499 and Krauss, IQR., VIII, 671). The custom to marry within the family was considered praiseworthy even for non-priests and is commended by the Rabbis; see Tosefta Kiddushin 1, 2; Yebamot 62b, p. Kiddushin 4, 4; Gen. rabba 18, 5; see also Book of Jubilees 4, 15-33; 8, 5-6, 9, 7; but see Kohler, IQR., V (1893), 406, note); comp. also Tobit, 6, 12-3 and MGWI., 1879, 507, 510 ff. ## CEREMONIAL LAWS

16. Philo, speaking of the First of the seventh month (II, 295), says that it is called Day of Trumpets, as trumpets are blown that day at the offering of the sacrifices. Their sounding is a commemoration of the giving of the Law. The trumpet being an instrument of war, symbolizes the war between the different forces of nature and humanity, for the pacification of which man must be greatful to God. Philo makes no mention of the traditional interpretation of יום תרועה (Num. 29, 1), i. e. that the "Shofar" (Sifra on Lev. 25, 9; see Hoffmann, Leviticus, II, 247) is to be sounded everywhere (except on sabbath; R. ha-shanah 29b) in Israel on that day and seems to have identified יום תרועה in Num. 29, I with ותקעתם בחצצרת, the blowing of trumpets every holiday at the offering of sacrifices (Num. 10, 10).14 The Karaites also reject the traditional interpretation of חרועה and explain it as loud praises to God כתר תורה; .Alph. 225; 364 (136a); נן ערן, 58a ff. כתר תורה Lev. 67a; אדרת אליהו, 48a; אפריון, 13; לבוש מלכות, 48-9) or as the sounding of הצצרח on every holiday (comp. גן עדן, 58d; Hadassi, 136a).

The Karaites also reject the traditional interpretation of ולקחתם לכם ביום הראשון (Lev. 23, 40) (see Josephus, Ant. III, 10, 4) and claim that the "four species" are for the construction of the "booths" mentioned in verse 42, deriving support for this view from Nehem. 8, 14 ff. See גן ערן, 56ab (where the views of Anan, Benjamin Nahawendi, and Daniel, al Kumsi are quoted); Hadassi, Alph. 168 (64b); 225-6; 364 (136a); Mibhar, Lev. 43a; כתר תורה, Lev. 67b; אררת אליהו, 47b (where the opinion of Jepheth b. Ali is quoted); Pinsker II, 96; לבוש מלכות, 14; לבוש מלכות, 34, 49. Philo, speaking of the Feast of Tabernacles (II, 297), makes no mention of the law of "four species." Philo, as Treitel (MGWJ., 1903, 512) suggests, must have understood verse 40 not as a separate commandment but, 116 like the Karaites, as prescribing material for the booths.

17. Tradition (Zebahim 5, 8; Maim., ה' בכורות, 6, 4) interprets Lev. 27, 32 to mean that the animal-tithe, מעשר בהמר

115 Some Karaites agree with Tradition in the interpretation of ולקחתם ; see, גן עדן 55b and the opinion of Joseph ha-Kohen (l. c., 55d; כתר , Lev. 67b; אדרת אליהו , Lev. 67b; אדרת אליהו

See also Book of Jubilees 16, 4 and B. Beer, Buch d. Jubiläen, 47.

<sup>216</sup> It must, however, be pointed out that Philo (l. c.), in contradistinction to Josephus (comp. M. Olitzki, Flavius Josephus und die Halacha, p. 25, n. 31 and p. 50), does not seem to require the construction of special booths for the Feast of Tabernacles.

See Mibhar, Lev. 51a; CDC CDC Lev. 76b.

- 18. Tradition applies the law of Lev. 22, 19 (תמים) to animal sacrifices only (Sifra to Lev. 1, 14; Menahot 6a and parallels). Philo, as is evident from the reason given by him for the law of תמים (II, 238) holds that תמים רפני יונה The Karaites agree with Philo. daytime!) The Karaites hold, like Philo, that no lights burned in the Temple during the day. See Mibhar, Exod. 57a and בתר תורה, Lev. 85b.

20. The Karaites reject the ancient traditional law that vows made and oaths taken without due consideration of the circumstances involved may be annulled by a court as those of a daughter by her father (Num. 30, 5-6) and that of a wife by her husband (l. c., v. 7 ff.). See Hadassi, Alph. 139-141, 364 (135a); Mibhar, Num. 29a; לברש מלכות, 51; comp. also Maim. commentary on Nedarim, ch. 10, end; יש שוה אצלינו בערי המערב ר"ל היתר השבועות מעשים בכל יום לפי ... שוה אצלינו בערי המערב ר"ל היתר השבועות מעשים בכל יום לפי, משנה תורה, 12, 12. This seems to be also the view of Philo who seems to express his objection to the law of annulment of vows by the statement (II, 273; comp. Werke Philos, II, 112, n. 2) that "no man is competent to heal vows."

was inaugurated in the time of Simon the Just. This opinion of Weiss is based on his view (l. c., 80; so also Geiger, Urschrift, 31-2) that אמעון הערוק did not favor the making of vows; see, however, Rapoport, ההורה בדרים, 23 ff. We do not know whether the law of החרת בדרים was even contested by the Sadducees; comp. p. Berakot 7, 2; Gen. rabba 91, 3. Schechter (Jewish Sectaries, I, XVIII; comp. ib., p. 16, 11. 7-8 and notes) believes that the sect which he designates "Zadokite" (see above) held that vows cannot be annulled; comp. also K. ישרת נדרים; see Kaleb Afendopolo's appendix to אדרת אליהו, Odessa 1870. 227a ff. It is, however, possible that in rejecting התרת נדרים the early Karaites, as in several other instances, turned into a law the general sentiment among the Babylonian Jews during the Gaonic period against the annulment of vows. Jehudai Gaon (quoted by Naḥshon Gaon) states: דאנן דאנן הלכות בדר ולא שבועה הלכות הלכות הלכות הלכות הלבות ולא ידעינן לאסר ולהתיר בה לא נדר ולא שבועה המודה גנוזה (duller, No. 122; comp. ib., Nos. 117, 120; התרתן של ראשונים (Nos. 6, 44, 75; הערית של ראשונים (145-6; התרתן של ראשונים (145-6)

- 21. The Karaites agree with Philo also in the interpretation of א תבשל גדי בחלב אמו (Exod. 23, 19; 34, 26; Deut. 14, 21) as prohibiting the seething of a kid or—by analogy—of any other animal in the milk of its mother. - 22. The law of Ex. 13, 13; Num. 18, 15 enjoins the redemption of the firstling of an ass with a lamb, and that, if the owner fails to redeem, the firstling is to be killed by having its neck broken. According to Tradition this law refers only to an ass but not to the firstling of any other unclean animal (Mekilta, ad loc.; Sifre on Num. 18, 15; Bekorot 5b). 128 So also Josephus, Ant., IV, 4, 4. As Olitzki suggests (Flavius Josephus und die Halacha, 29) this anti-traditional view of Josephus may be due to his desire to remove any suspicion that the ass occupied a favorable position in Jewish law. This may also account for the view of Philo. Philo omits the law of 17071 (Exod. 13, 13; comp. Ritter, 120; Olitzki, Magazin, XVI, 178.). Nor do all the Karaites accept the literal interpretation of 170791; see the opinion of Sahl b. Masliah quoted in Mibhar, Exod. 19b (comp. Ibn Ezra, ad loc.). Aaron b. Joseph (Mibhar, l. c. and Num. 17b) agrees with Tradition that only the ass is to be redeemed. Comp. also Weiss, Dor, I, 51.

 The Philonian halakah, in general, is a problem still to be solved. Philo lived in Egypt where as we now know from the papyri recently discovered in Assuan and Elephantine (Sayce-Cowley, Aramaic Papyri discovered in Assuan. London 1906; Sachau, Drei aramäische Papyrusurkunden aus Elephantine, 1908), the Jews were permanently settled in the sixth century B. C. (comp. Schürer. Ap., II. 4; comp. Schürer, l. c., 35 ff.; 40). The city of Alexandria early became a great center of Jewish activity, second only to Jerusalem. The existence of the Temple of Onias did not affect the loyalty of the Jews in Egypt to the Sanctuary in Jerusalem (Frankel, Einfluss, 157; Schürer, l. c., 147-8). Palestinian scholars often visited Alexandria (Rapoport, ערך מלין, 101b). The Palestinian interpretation of the Law and the practices in vogue there were not unknown to them (Frankel, Vorstudien zu der Septuaginta, 185-186; comp. Halevy, דורות הראשונים, Ic, 127, note; 129, note) and the influence of Palestinian exegesis is patent in that great monument of the Jews of Egypt, the Septuagint (Frankel, Vorstudien zu der Septuaginta; Ueber den Einfluss d. paläst. Excgese auf d. alex. Hermeneutik; Ueber paläst. und alex. Schriftforschung; but see Herzfeld, Geschichte, III, 548 ff.). Philo, the great representative of Egyptian Jewry, knew of the existence of an oral tradition and considered it as binding as the Written Law (see the references by Ritter, 14-5; comp. Neumark, Geschichte d. Jüdischen Philosophie des Mittelalters, II, Berlin 1910, 418, note; see, however, Werke Philos, II, 289, note). 128 He also visited Palestine and there saw the people living according to that Tradition (Grätz, MGWJ., 1877, 436 ff.). How are we then to account for the interpretations and decisions in which Philo deviates from traditional halakah? Are such deviations subjective opinions of Philo?126 Do they reflect the actual practices in vogue among Egyptian Jewry<sup>137</sup> or do they go back to a peculiar tradition?<sup>138</sup>

But be this as it may, the fact, which I have attempted to demonstrate, that in most of Philo's deviations from Tradition the Karaites hold the same view, points to some kind of dependence of the latter on Philo, or to common descent from a particular tradition. The former view gains in probability from the following:

The Hellenic or Alexandrian method of interpretation of the Scriptures did not remain unknown to the Palestinian teachers of the law and the works and views of Philo found their way to the Palestinian schools. Moreover, the general belief that Philo and his works were lost to the Jews of the Middle Ages until Azariah dei Rossi, about the end of the sixteenth century, reintroduced him in Jewish literature, is now proved to be unfounded. The tenth century Karaite, Abu Yusuf al-Ķirķisani, in his work Kitāb al-anwār wal-marākib (written 937), speaks of a Jewish Sect named "the Magarites" (אלמנאריה). This sect, says Kirkisani, sprang up before the rise of Christianity. The adherents of the sect make the biblical passages that speak of attributes of God refer to an angel who, according to them, created the world (ed. Harkavy, 304). Among them are the works of the "Alexandrine" (אלאסכנדראני) which are the best of the "Books of the Cave" (ib., 283). The same author, speaking of Benjamin Nahawendi whom he considers the second founder of Karaism, says that Benjamin's belief that an angel created the world is similar to the view held by the Alexandrine (ib., 314). ingeniously suggested that these "Magarites" are Egyptian Essenes, known as the Therapeutae. The "Alexandrine" whose works they so highly estimated is no other than Philo (ib., 256 ff.) and Nahawendi's "Angel" goes back to Philo's "Logos" (comp. Poznański, REJ., L, 1905, "Philon dans l'ancienne littérature judéo-arabe," where all the material is collected and discussed). The view that some of the works of Philo were known to the Jews in the eighth, ninth, and tenth centuries—the period of religious unrest among the Jews and the birth of Jewish religious philosophy—is shared by many scholars. See Bacher, JQR., VII, 701; Hirschfeld, ib., XVII (1905), 65 ff.; Poznański, ל c. (see id., אוצר ישראל, III, 128a); Eppenstein, MGWJ., LIV (1910), 200; D. Neumark, Geschichte der jüdischen Philosophie des Mittelalters, I, Berlin 1907, 128, 133, 560, 568; II, 372 and 466 ff. Among Philo's (the "Alexandrine's) works-which, as Kirkisani informs us, were eagerly studied,—might have been those that contain Philo's expositions of biblical laws; Philo thus influencing, not only the theological views of the first Karaite philosophers (Benjamin Nahawendi and his followers), but also their interpretation of biblical laws and their practices.<sup>300</sup>

The allegorical method of interpretation, characteristic of Philo, was popular also among the Karaites; see Weiss, Dor, IV, 86 and Poznański, MGWJ., 1897, 208, n. 1; comp. also H. Hirschfeld, Jefeth b. Ali's Arabic Commentary to Nahum, London 1911, 8 and 10 ff. The Karaites share also the view of Philo that the Decalogue is the text on which the whole Law is but a commentary (this view is found also in the later Midrashim; see the references by L. Löw, Ges. Schr., I, 42. A similar view is found in p. Shekalim 6, 1. Reifmann, That, I, 350 and Weiss, Dor, IV, 141 are to be corrected accordingly). Saadia Gaon proved to them by it the possibility of an oral law (comp. Weiss, Dor, IV, 141) and the Karaites Nissi b. Noah (eleventh century; see lastly Harkavy, 137 Dnu, intr., VII) and Judah Hadassi (twelfth century) arranged their works, like Philo, according to this view. Comp. also Müller in Oeuvres complétes, XI, intr., XIX; Bacher, Jewish Encyclopedia, X, 583b.

The Karaite Zerah b. Nathan (end of sixteenth century) was much interested in the works of Philo (Neubauer, Aus der Petersburger Bibliothek, 75, 125). The famous nineteenth century Karaite Abraham Firkowitsch indeed asserts that Philo was a Karaite (preface to מבחר ישרים, 2a), but, according to him, Jesus was a Karaite likewise (חובית), חוות הפוחר, 54a, 56a; Kirkisani, ed. Harkavy, 305, 9 and Hadassi, JQR., VIII (1896), 436 state that Jesus was a Sadducee); comp. I. B. Levinsohn, חתר הסופה, Odessa 1863, 18-9.
